THE BOMBER PRESS IN GREAT BRITAIN

Another in a series of articles written by W. R. Legge and C. V. Carrers, who represented the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association in a recent tour overseas.
Although our schedule did not include a visit to the British Parliament, most of the members of the Bomber Press party managed to steal enough time to pay a visit to this bulwark of freedom.
On September 11th, the two representatives of the weekly press of Canada, Mr. C. V. Carrers and I, paid a visit to Parliament. Our visit was arranged through Sir Drummond Shields, secretary of the Empire Parliamentary Association, who secured for us admission cards to the Dominion's Gallery.
First we visited Sir Drummond Shields' office which adjoins Westminster Hall. This hall is one of the oldest and most interesting sections of the Parliament Buildings. It was built by William Rufus in 1087-1100, and was altered by Richard II in 1377-1399. It was originally part of the Palace of Westminster, and was destroyed by fire in 1834, and was incorporated in the Parliament Buildings, the balance of which dates only from about 1840.
This hall may well be called the birthplace of democracy, for it was here that in 1265 Simon de Montfort opened the first parliament, the model on which all subsequent democratic parliaments have been patterned. It is interesting to note that Simon de Montfort, who is considered to have been a martyr to liberal government, was a French-speaking Englishman. For two hundred years after 1265 the proceedings of the English parliament were conducted in French.
Westminster Hall is 290 feet long, 65 feet wide, and 90 feet high. The hammer beam roof of carved oak, which dates from 1399, is one of the principal features.
Previous to 1832, state trials were held in this hall, including those of Charles I, Sir Thomas More, Guy Fawkes and Warren Hastings. It was also in this hall that King Edward VII and George V lay in state before their funerals.
Next we went to see the ruins of the House of Commons. It is uncanny the way in which this room has been totally destroyed with nothing left but the walls, while rooms next to it have been practically untouched. It is like many other spots in England where one house in the middle of a block is completely destroyed with those on both sides left intact.
We were taken to lunch in the Parliamentary restaurant, where we found that the members have no favour so far as food is concerned. It is neither better nor worse than other restaurants in London. On the wall is an electric sign which shows who is speaking in the House. While going through one of the corridors in the Parliament Buildings we came face to face with the Hon. W. P. Atwood, Postmaster General of Canada, who, we were surprised to know was in England.
We were then taken to the temporary quarters of the House of Commons. There were about 100 members, and it must be crowded when all are present at the same time. The debate on the Indian problem was in progress and we heard some very fine oratory. We listened to part of the debate, after hearing something of this vexing problem from authorities who have been in India and understand something about it, we have come to the conclusion that few of those who offer gratuitous advice from a distance of several thousand miles are qualified to offer opinions.
It is not an easy matter to attend a session of the British Parliament at the present time. There were few other visitors when we were there. We were sorry not to have seen the Prime Minister in action but he was not in the House while we were present. The proceedings were interrupted by a Royal Com-

If You Are Eligible, Enlist Now

The first of a series of recruiting drives which aim at increasing the strength of the Reserve Army in Canada by some 25,000 men, will get under way next Saturday in Toronto. Plans have been completed for a most aggressive campaign in the provincial capital and in the co-operation of all the units of the Reserve Army in the city, the strong committee of the Greater Toronto War Service Advisory Council, industrial and business organizations and the citizens in general, it is confidently anticipated that the objective of 4,439 recruits will be secured before the drive ends on April 17.
Last year the campaign in Toronto secured over 8,000 recruits for the Reserve Army and while the objective this year is slightly more than half that number, it was realized from the start that the task would be somewhat difficult. The Reserve Army has been reduced during the winter months to 55,000.
To be eligible for Reserve Army units anywhere in Canada a man must belong to one of five age groups: 17 and 18 years of age, single men 42 1/2 to 50 years, married men 29 1/2 to 50 years. Great War veterans up to 55 years. (These four are open to men of categories "A", "B" and "C"), and all men 17 to 50 years of category "G". In addition it has been requested by police and civilian defense committee officials that policemen and men holding key positions in C.D.C. Organizations be discouraged from enlisting.
The Commanding Officers of units have also stated that they prefer that men engaged in war industrial jobs refrain from making applications as a large number of such men in the Reserve Army would cause considerable disorganization, either in the Reserve Army units or war industries, if their units were called out in defense of Canada.
To bring the attention to the notice of all eligible men, the Toronto Committee has arranged for numerous parades, demonstrations and noonday recruiting meetings as well as several features. These latter include church parades for all units on April 10, 11 and 12, a proposed parade of war industrial workers accompanied by their products, on April 10 or 11, and a massed flight of aircraft over the city on April 17. On this occasion the units of the garrison will take up defensive positions at important strategic points.
The campaign in Toronto will be similar to those followed in other parts of the Dominion. Some will be held concurrently with the Toronto dates while others will be later in the season. However, all will be completed early enough so that the recruits will have time to pass through their basic training before their units go to camp this summer.
There has been a great change in the last two years from the former Non Permanent Active Militia to the Reserve Army. The former was largely a recruiting ground for the Active Army but now that the Reserve Army figures largely in the plans for the defense of Canada against possible enemy attack, the Reserve Army is a distinctive and self-contained defensive force which may be called out for active service in Canada at any time. Any man in Canada may be called out to help in the defense of the Dominion, whether he belongs to the Reserve Army or not and enlistment in the Reserve Army means that he will be given if called out, in an emergency.

Prices and Trade Board Staff Is Large

At the end of January the total staff of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board numbered 4,621 persons. It was stated in a recent tabulation in the House of Commons Monday by T. L. Church (Prog. Con., Toronto-Broadview). The total payroll for the year ended last Jan. 31, was $5,018,591.

Dear With Broken Leg

(Sheburne Free Press & Economist)
Mr. Alex. Morrison, five sided of Melancthon, north of town, found a young deer with a broken leg on his farm a few days ago. Mr. Morrison supposed the deer had broken the leg trying to get over the fence. He notified Game Warden Eddie Smith of Orangeville, who came and took possession of the animal and killed it and took it back to Orangeville to hand the deer-meat over to the Lord Dufferin hospital.
Over in Harrison they are wrestling with the problem of supplying adequate shed accommodation for the horses of farmers who patronize the town.

CHICKS? SURE! if . . .

YES—the Bray Hatcheries have chicks for sale, in spite of a deluge of orders. Not, perhaps, in the breed that's your first choice. Not, perhaps, in the Xtra-Profits grade. But Bray Chicks of the usual high Bray quality.
Mind you, that's not saying that the breed and grade you want aren't available. Very probably they are. But demand is uneven. In some breeds it is so heavy that the Bray Hatcheries are booked ahead—in those breeds—for weeks. In others even last-minute orders can be filled, for both day-old and started chicks.
NAME YOUR SECOND CHOICE
So when you order your Bray Chicks, name your second choice . . . even your third choice, if possible . . . on breed, grade, and date of shipment. It may prevent delay and disappointment. All Bray breeds have the same backing of skill and care behind them, so you will probably be pleased with the results you get, even if the breed isn't the one you ordinarily order.
