Most people agree that radio humour is a much needed tonic these days and offers welcome relief from the more serious side of world news and discussion. One radio comedian whose Sunday evening variety half hour holds a stellar place in entertainment circles, has apparently issued a has let it be known in radio circles that he is contemplating leaving the air for at least 6 months and s not prepared to say when he

In his own words Fred Allen ays . . . "I am going to take s rest. I've heen in radio for elever years and now I'm going to sit back and relax for a while"... To the average radio listener a half hour variety show such as Fred Allen presents every Sun-day evening may sound a pretty easy job. Just thirty minutes of it would be an eye opener to know how many strenuous hours of work go into the preparation of auch a programme. Each week there must be new jokes, music, dramatic incidents and the fram-ing of programme styling to suit guest stars. Such things are simply not just drawn out of a hat. A half hour show of this type represents at least three and sometimes up to five or six full working days of writing and pre-paration. Then come hours of rehearsal. From one Sunday programme to another it's a steady grind into which must be sand wiched many other personal ap-pearance shows. It is rumoured that Fred Allen may switch to llywood for a while. Here's hoping the lure of the screen will not prevent his return to the airwaves next fall. We need all the good cheer that's possible these otherwise drab wartime days.

CHAPTER XXIV Halfway up the stairs

Once before they had stood like this, Peter ascending a stair, she in a billowing gown at its head. The similarity must have struck him: he stood an instant, as though doubtful, searching her face for some sign of remember-

Peter sprawled himself comfortably in a chair. "Whew," he said, "you've been harder to reach this past couple of weeks than a foreign ambassador. I've been phoning you almost daily. I expected at least you'd call back-"I didn't even get the message," Candace said. "But that isn't Flint's fault. I've been on a case until just two days ago, and wanted a couple of days to shop before going away, so I told her if anyone called just to say I couldn't accept another case."
"Going away? Vacation? Peter asked, glancing at the new clothes and heavily laden trunks.

"No," she said shortly. "The same case." She felt flushed and uncor fortable, she didn't want to have to discuss the Harper case with him. She added reluctantly, "Old Mrs. Harner. Do you know her?

Today, there's a little white tablet that's making a lot of difference... to women throughout the whole British Isles. A recent British Government survey showed up these facts: that women, all over Britain, are counting on Aspirin tablets as one of the three most helpful drug items for maintaining health and morale.

Now that hundreds of thousands of women are working in war plants, doing men's jobs in the factories, there's no time to "give in" to headache, neurilic, or neuralgic pain. So when distress first starts ... women reach into their pocket-books, and take the tablet they beauther on their pocket-

Candace shrugged. "It's a job. One job or another, what does it matter?" She added defiantly, "As a matter of fact, I'm looking forward to it. I'd take any sort of a case to get away from here, to have a vacation."

Peter rose and went to stare out of the window. She had thought he looked tired, and now she saw that his shoulders had a weary, discouraged droop. "That shoots my proposition then, I guess," he said. She said firmly, steeling herself

After an instant of heavy silence Candace snuffed out her cigarette impatiently and rose. "I don't see what you expect me to do about it. Me, of all people." "I don't expect you to do any-thing.
