thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." Whenever we do what Satan wants us to do, then Satan has taken the place of God for us, and we have put Satan's will before God's will.

Hallowing of God's Name
 "After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father who art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name." Of the petitions which are included in this prayer, none has been less prayed than this which our Lord sets first. Many a man has cried earnestly and sincerely enough, "Give me this day my daily bread"; many with deeper earnestness, and out of a more appalling helplessness, have cried, "Deliver us from evil"; but few have learned to have this petition deepest in the heart and readiest on the lip. "Hallowed be thy name." There is something here that strikes us at once. While we ordinarily first bring our own needs to God in prayer, and then think of what belongs to God and His interests, the Lord reverses the order. First, Thy name, Thy kingdom, Thy will; then, give us, forgive us, lead us, deliver us. The lesson is of more importance than we think. In true worship the Father must be first, must be all. The sooner we learn to forget ourselves in the desire that He may be glorified, the richer will be the blessing that prayer will bring to us. No one ever loses by what he sacrifices for the Father.

"But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and truth: for such doth the Father seek to be his worshippers. God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship in spirit and truth." No other worship than that which is offered in spirit and truth can possibly be actual worship of God. . . . Not the outward action of the worshiper, not the forms he uses or the gifts he brings, but his spirit alone can be brought to meet the spiritual presence of God. Where this is done, God Himself meets the spirit which He has sought and prepared, and to which He has made known the truth lying at the foundation of all worship, the truth which reveals Himself.

"Hullo Boy"

While searching in the ruins of his bombed house in a town in England, a special police inspector heard a muffled voice in the debris shout "Hullo boy," and found his parrot, almost exhausted after being buried 36 hours.

Can Spot Tell-Tale Submarine Feather

Then Air Patrol Begins To Bomb The U-Boats

It is impossible to spot submarines below the surface from airplanes over the Atlantic, says the Windsor Star. In the clearer waters of the Mediterranean, an airman can look down and see submarines as much as 60 feet below the surface. But, in the Atlantic any submarine beneath the surface is out of sight.

However, airplanes on patrol can spot the tell-tale feather of water made by the periscope of a submarine. Once that is seen, the air patrol can begin to bomb with telling effect.

Any submarine commander, who knows there is a constant air patrol being kept overhead, realizes that he is tempting fate to put up his periscope. He understands that the pilot aloft will spot the feather and begin to work on him. Hence, more than one enemy submarine commander has kept his periscope down, refusing to take a chance with the airplanes overhead. And, if he does not use his periscope, the submarine commander has to attack shipping blindly, which is not effective.

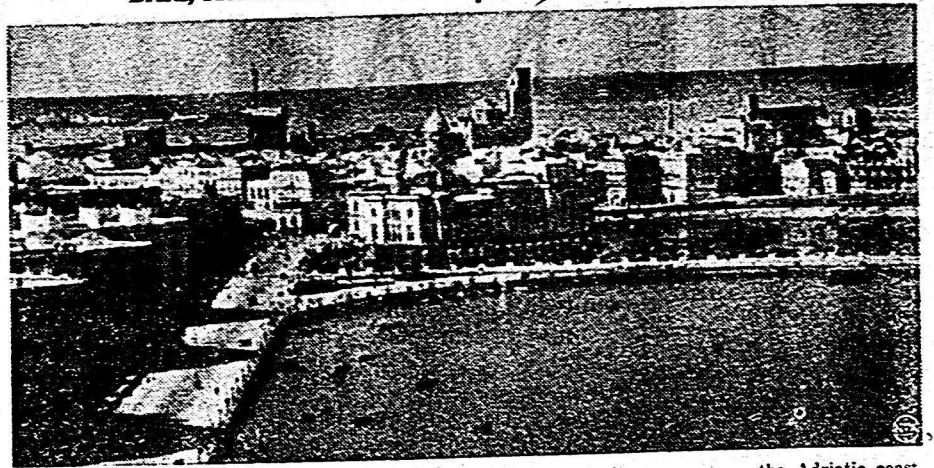

The air patrols in submarine-infested waters would like to sink a lot of submarines. However, their main job is to see that the vessels get through safely and, if the patrols can keep the submarines from attacking the convoys, that is the big part of the job. Any submarine they sink are just that much cream in the coffee.

Gold Mines Must Be Kept Operating

One of the remarkable developments of the war has been the ability of Canada to finance its own magnificent war effort. It was made possible by a financial condition in which the production of gold had a large and important part.

No less important will be the contribution of the mines to the post war problems. They will be expected to help by producing more gold and especially in giving employment to returning soldiers and others released from various war industries. Under these conditions the necessity for keeping them going should not be overlooked. — Port Arthur News-Chronicle.

BARI, ITALY'S ADRIATIC BASE, CAPTURED BY BRITISH

The photo above shows part of the harbor front of Bari, Italian seaport on the Adriatic coast, 69 miles north of Brindisi, both of which were captured by British forces. Bari, from which Il Duce's hapless legions sailed to invade Albania in 1940, is one of the most important ports in the area, having a double harbor, one of them new and recently enlarged.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

October 10
REVERENCE FOR GOD.—Exodus 20: 3-7; Matthew 4:10; 6:9; John 4: 23, 24.

GOLDEN TEXT—God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship in spirit and truth. John 4:24.

Memory Verse: I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go unto the house of Jehovah. Psalm 122:1.
THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING
 Time.—The commandments were given in 1445 B.C.; our Lord's temptation took place in January, A.D. 27; the Sermon on the Mount was delivered in the summer of A.D. 28; our Lord's words with the woman at the well took place in December, A.D. 27.

Place.—The commandments were given on Mount Sinai; our Lord's temptation in the wilderness near the Jordan; the Sermon on the Mount was given somewhere on a mountain in northern Palestine; the discourse with the woman of Samaria was at Sychar.

Our Only God
 "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." This commandment forbids the recognition of any other than Jehovah as God. This includes the prohibition of ascribing to any other being divine attributes; rendering to any creature the homage or obedience due to God alone; or exercising toward any other person or object those feelings of love, confidence, and submission which belong of right only to God."

Idolatrous Worship
 "Thou shalt not make unto thee a graven image, nor any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth: thou shalt not bow down thyself unto them, nor serve them; for I Jehovah thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, upon the third and upon the fourth generation of them that hate me, and showing loving kindness unto thousands of them that love me and keep my commandments."

This commandment opposes idolatry, that is, the worship of an idol or image of God, or of God through an idol. We are not to make, worship or serve an idol. Anger, jealousy, hatred and revenge are ascribed to God, not as passions, but as feelings of a holy being in regard to that which is evil. He that makes and worships an idol has lost the knowledge of the true God.

This iniquity is called the iniquity of the fathers, inasmuch as it originates with them, and is only perpetuated in the sons who adhere to it. The fathers will have to account for their own iniquity, not only as men, but as fathers setting a bad example to their household. But the sons who, on arriving at the exercise of a natural judgment, walk in the same iniquity will be treated as responsible beings, and visited for the iniquity which they have made their own. The comforting promise is that God will never fail to show mercy to all successive generations that humbly and thankfully own Him for their God.

Use of God's Name
 "Thou shalt not take the name of Jehovah thy God in vain; for Jehovah will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain." This commandment forbids all irreverence toward God; not only the highest act of irreverence in calling on Him to bear witness to falsehood, but also the irreverent use of His name; all careless, unnecessary reference to Him or His attributes; all indecorous conduct in His worship.

A FARM WIFE CHATS TO WOMEN

By Gwendoline P. Clarke

Feet! F-e-e-t—yes, that's what we are going to talk about today! After all, it is a subject in which most of us are interested, isn't it? Not all in the same way, of course, but still interested. And I wouldn't mind betting, that if there were figures to prove it, nine out of every ten adult people would admit to having some kind of foot trouble. There is hardly a person who hasn't a favorite corn that must be treated with respect, or a bunion that disfigures every shoe she wears. I say "she" in this case because most of the bunion sufferers are women. And there are countless hundreds of fallen arches wending their weary way through life, and an equal number of short tempers and frazzled nerves as a result!

And what do we do about it? Mostly grin and bear it, I guess—with more emphasis on the bear than the grin. In fact we probably look on foot trouble as one of the many ills to which the flesh is heir to. Oh, we may pare that corn, or stick a plaster on it, and we may get an arch support or a metatarsal pad. If they help us, that's fine. If they don't, well, we just go on suffering, that's all.

Generally, from time to time, we hear of some person who has been to somebody or other, and from all accounts you would think they had had some sort of miracle worked on their feet. But most of us are sceptical of such stories and pay little attention to them. Partner and I have both been a doubting Thomas in that respect.

But not any more—no indeed, we have both reformed, and are now ready and anxious to spread the glad news abroad, that you and I don't need to go limping our way through life.

You see, in desperation, we at last took our sceptical minds and tortured feet to a foot specialist—and we each came out with a pair of feet that are now ready to go places and do things. And all for the price of a dollar a foot.

And what does the doctor do? Well, he first prepares the corns and callouses by placing a cotton pad over them soaked with some sort of softening solution. Then he pares them—and you don't feel a thing! Did I say "pares" them? Carve would be a better word, for as you watch him you wonder if he is slicing off your foot. Little pads, kept in place with plaster, are afterwards put over the corns and callouses, and finally each foot is massaged with something so cool and soothing it makes you feel like a million dollars.

Then you put on your shoes and socks, pay your money and walk out, with more comfort than you ever thought possible.

However, this treatment isn't a cure-all. At least our foot specialist made no claim to cure our troubles—only to relieve them. A friend of mine tells me that she finds it necessary to have her feet treated about once every three months. And who can grumble at that?

And I'll tell you something else. Even to sit in the doctor's office is a revelation, for people are coming and going all the time and it is interesting to note their reactions. While we were waiting our turn an oldish man came out—presumably after a treatment. His face was literally beaming. He looked down at his feet and he stamped them. He went a few steps and stamped them again. In fact he just kept looking at his feet as if he couldn't believe they belonged to him.

That was surely a story without words, wasn't it?

Well, I have passed this information along to you in the hope that it will be of service. You don't need the name of the doctor whom we visited because if you want similar treatment all you have to do is look up the telephone directory of your nearest city and you will surely find one or more chiropodists listed, all of whom will doubtless be qualified to give you just as good a treatment and equally as much relief as we received at so small a cost.

So now I've told you, and if you go on suffering you will be just as foolish as we were—and that's saying a lot.

The British Red Cross will spend $10,000 on playing cards for prisoners of war in Italy.
