changed my books, and went to the show. "Lassie Come Home" will stay with me long after other shows have been forgotten. As you probably know it is about a boy and his dog. There isn't much that one can add to that. The underlying pathos in the story is more in the thirds it doesn't tell than in the things it doesn't tell than what it does. The little boy's mother sometimes appears hard and unfeeling. But anyone with a knowledge of what the miscry of unemployment can do to a family knows the hardness to be merely a cloak to hide deeper emotions Don't miss "Lassie Come Home"
