SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

October 8
JESUS' PROGRAM FOR MEETING LIFE'S PROBLEMS
 Matthew 4:1-11; 6:24-34;
 Luke 4:16-30.

PRINTED TEXT, Matthew 4:1-4; 6:31-34; Luke 4:16-21.

GOLDEN TEXT—Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. Matthew 4:4.
 Devotional Reading: Hebrews 2:10-18.

Memory Verse: For thou, Jehovah, hast made me glad. Psalm 92:4.

Triumph Over Temptation
 "Then was Jesus led up of the spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil . . . but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." The principle involved in Christ's reply was that He would work no miracle to satisfy His own will. In self-denial He would follow God, submitting to His will, and trusting that His mighty power would help in the time of need in the way that His wisdom might see fit.

God's Outward Blessing
 "Be not therefore anxious, saying, What shall we eat? . . . and all these things shall be added unto you." Our Lord says that if men will really seek the kingdom of God and his righteousness all these material things, which the heathen nations seek exclusively and which are necessary for life, will be added. As a rule, God's outward blessing goes with the inward; and he who by patient industry has honestly sought his daily bread has found it.

Please God To-Day
 "Be not therefore anxious for the morrow: for the morrow will be anxious for itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." Christ says "to-morrow and all its wants will be provided for you by your heavenly Father; therefore think of it without anxiety and try to do right and please God to-day."

Jesus In Nazareth
 "And he came to Nazareth, where he had been brought up . . . to set at liberty them that are bruised." From the word here translated "anointed" comes our English word "Christ" which means literally "the Anointed One," and thus the "Sent One."

The Acceptable Year
 "To proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord." This was the time when men—sinners broken, ruined, lawless, hopeless men—would be acceptable to God if they would believe in Christ and accept His way of grace. And the acceptable year of the Lord is not ended. Any man in the world to-day will be accepted of God if he will take Christ for his Saviour and allow God to cleanse him from sin.

The Scripture Fulfilled
 "And he closed the book, and gave it back to the attendant, and sat down: and the eyes of all in the synagogue were fastened on him. And he began to say unto them, To-day has this scripture been fulfilled in your ears."

Jesus quietly announced that the prediction of the prophet Isaiah was that day fulfilled in Him before their very eyes. The people doubted that this man, a carpenter's son, is the one of whom the prophet spoke. But Jesus reveals his profound knowledge of what they were going to do and how they would reject Him, and He would go on to those who would accept Him. And Jesus immediately took Himself out of their midst for His time had not yet come.

What Is Happening To Our Language?

Quite good writers no longer seem to distinguish between "precipitate" and "precipitous," "elemental" and "elementary," "between" "distinterested" and "uninterested," "between" "historical" and "historic."—From a letter in the press protest might also be registered against the introduction of numerous vulgarities, as for instance, the substitute so often used for the admirable word "courage." Some of the magazines which should be among the leaders in protecting the language, are actually making free use of profanity.—Port Arthur News-Chronicle.

Sapphires and Diamonds

CHAPTER V

Peggy found one of William's grandsons down by the gate waiting to open it for her. His little calico shirt tails flapped in the breeze above the patched pants that had once belonged to an older brother. His white teeth in their black setting shone in the sunlight. She waved the light whip towards him as she drove through the gates.

Once on the highway Peggy drew a long breath and settled down to the business of thinking. "That's what I get for borrowing things," she muttered, remembering how she had always been taught never to borrow from anyone.

There was only one thing to do. Stop at Carver's jewelry store and see if the ring could be straightened. She had no idea how long it would take. But she would go there immediately. She had heard that since young Jim Carver had come home from college and gone into business with his father they had branched out considerably in the jewelry business. Perhaps that would include being able to straighten a platinum ring.

In spite of the many cars in Marshville, no one ever thought it strange to see Peggy Horton in the old pony cart. She had driven it ever since anyone could remember seeing her about, and no one connected a Horton with anything but horses. There were still a few horse rails about the old square in the center of which stood a fountain that had served as a drinking fount for the horses of former days. Now it was only a source of cooling beauty. Stores, bank, post-office, and the old wooden two-story hotel surrounded the square on all four sides, the streets entering from the corners.

Peggy, stopping before the hitching post that was the closest to Carver's, jumped out and tied her, exchanging greetings with one or two people as she did so. Then walking rapidly, she entered the store.

She was glad to see that Jim Carver was not there. He would probably have asked a lot of questions. Old Mr. Carver, with his bald head bent closely over a book, was seated alone at the back of the store.

"Why, hello, Miss Peggy," he called, coming forward to greet her, after carefully marking his place with a slip of paper between the pages. "How's your grandmother? You ought to be mighty proud of her. There's nobody left around here like Miss Mary. I remember—"

But Peggy had no time to listen to reminiscences.

"She's quite well, thank you," she interrupted. "Mr. Carver, I wonder if you could straighten a ring for me? You see," she said reaching into her bag and handing him the ring, "it belongs to a friend of mine who is visiting me, and in some way it got bent." Peggy did not prevaricate easily and she wondered if her scarlet face were giving her away.

Mr. Carver took the ring, eyeing it gravely while Peggy anxiously waited.

"That certainly is a lovely ring," he said at last. "A girl with a ring like that ought to know better than to be careless with it. Well now, I reckon I can straighten it all right for her."

Peggy relaxed somewhat. "Could you do it this afternoon? Right away?" she asked.

Mr. Carver looked at her over his glasses, one eyebrow raised quizzically.

"I declare all you young folks are just alike. Everything must be done right now. No waiting. You all never will remember that Rome wasn't built in a day. I reckon, though, that I can do it. I'm not doing anything else right now. Might as well do this. Can you come back after a while?"

Peggy came out of the store with her heart singing. The ring was not ruined. It would be as good as new and she could have it on when she met Nancy. In spite of her knowledge that she should not borrow, having borrowed it she might as well carry out Harry's idea, she told herself. All seemed well now.

She paused a moment on the sidewalk to look about her, deciding what to do next. Across the square before the hotel she saw several boys gathered about an automobile. It was the car from California that she had seen that morning. She wondered where its owner was, and why he was still in Marshville. There was nothing in this sleepy little town to keep even a tourist, she reflected.

She went into a candy store up near the corner to get some of Nancy's favorite candy then stopped in a drug store to buy some magazines and a soda, to kill a little time before she should go back for the ring. At last she rose, and after paying her check started down the street. There was within a few feet of Carver's when she heard rapid footsteps behind her and a voice cried:

"Well, hello. Imagine seeing you here!"

Turning quickly she found herself face to face with the Man from California, as she immediately termed him. Peggy eyed him coldly. He was tall, she realized, and broad shouldered. He wore a well-tailored light linen suit which contrasted becomingly with his dark coloring. His almost black hair, which had been blowing in the breeze this morning, was now brushed neatly down. He had nice eyes, she found herself thinking, before she answered curtly:

"I am neither a hitch-hiker nor a pick-up."

"Oh, I say," he began in some confusion. "I didn't mean it like that. I was so surprised at seeing you again just had to speak. Sort of talking aloud, I guess."

"Yes, I understand," Peggy said pausing at the entrance of the jewelry store. "There is another man here who talks to himself. He is about ninety, and usually sits along here in the sun. The constable keeps an eye on him to see that nothing happens to him. He probably won't mind watching you too." (Continued Next Week)

Harriet Bergman, above, of New York, actually sleeps on the job—and gets paid for it. She tests sleeping qualities of new-style pajamas for designer Harry Berger. Most of her work is done at home, although she has a cot in the Berger offices.

Bombs Don't Hinder School Examinations

Boys and girls of Southern England have refused to allow flying bombs to interfere with their general and higher school certificate examinations, now being held.

Head teachers are full of praise for the calm way in which the children have gone about their work.

One group of girls began their geography paper at 9.30 a.m. and finished it at 2.45 p.m., having spent only 50 minutes on the paper, and the rest of the time in shelters.

In another school the girls doing their algebra paper had to go four times from a ground-floor classroom to the shelters and finally they had to finish the paper writing on their knees in the shelter.

Edward VII 'Rides' Again In Paris

The bronze equestrian statue of King Edward VII is back in its place in the courtyard of the Societe Generale, one of France's great banks. More than two years ago bank officials whisked it away to a hiding place when Germans ordered it melted down to make bullets. German authorities actually had
