TANDSSSSSSSSSSSSSSS The Jade God

He left them standing by the ta-ble, the girl trying to make talk, plainly agitated; the old man's thin, black-clad back still squarely on the retreating offender.

"Hang him!" Mark thought viotently; "it's like giving up — but he can have his chance. She's got to know; I've been a sneak!" His sheer rage at Fosdick did not blind him to own iniquity.

Traffic was congested outside, and the doorman took quite a while to summon a taxi. It seemed in-terminable to Mark, wondering how bad Fosdick was making it.

"If I'd told myseli!" he fumed.
"Well, I deserve it — it was a black thing to do!"

"Here it is, sir, one of the new

Mark swung through the revolv-ing doors of the vestibule and made his way toward the alcove. Fos-dick's back was still there, turned his way, and Pam was opposite, a little flushed, a little ill at ease, he

The red was staining Mark's cheek as he walked down the room with Pam. They did not speak, tables were filled up, and, once or twice they had to pass single file between them, but he thought she knew; he could feel a change in her. Outside the door he stopped her. The street was crowded but they were alone together for all that.

"I've got something to say to you," he said hoarsely; "I suppose you know it?"

She looked up at that, her eyes gravely perplexed. She snook her head.
"Didn't Fosdick tell you?"

"No!"

They looked at each other. Bitterness and shame and blind rage at the old lawyer seemed suddenly swept clean away; Mark only knew that he loved Pam!

"Of course you saw that some

Mark, standing, with his hand on the back of his chair, wanted to strike him for it. He knew that h had never before in his life been nearer murder than at that mo-ment! Something hardened in him; he had been on the point of con-fession, of making a clean breast of it to Pam, but Fosdick was like a challenge. He stared back at him with fury in his look. There was a reathless kind of silence and Fos dick's slow contemptuous smile ard as a blow. The young man's breath came, suddenly choking, his hands clenched at his sides, he was hardly aware of the girl, nor that Pam's eyes turned questioningly om one to the other. "I'm an old friend of Horace By-ram of Utica," Mr. Fosdick's dry roice had a hint of mockery in it. "I don't seem to remember you ir, as - a Byram!"

Mark's white face defied him.
"You know I'm not a Byram, Mr.
Fosdick," he said in a low voice,

Old Fosdick cackled; the sound was as unmirthful as the startled screech of a frightened hen. But he dventured no farther; he saw the look in Mark's eyes; he turned his

JESUS' CONCERN FOR ALL Matthew 9:1, 9-13, 18-26

Golden Text. - Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them, for this in the law and the prophets.—Matthew 7:12

The most concise account of our Lord's life consists of one sentence only; "He went about doing good and healing". Previous to our lesson we find the people prayed that Jesus would depart out of their midst. Iesus dos not remain where he is not wanted, and he entered into a ship and came to his own city. Jesus passed Matthew, who was busy in the employ of the Roman government collecting taxes. Only two words were spoken "Follow me" and without hesitation Matt-hew left all to follow Jesus. Let us not be too busy with earthly pursuits to hear the call "Take up thy cross and follow me". Luke tells us Matthew "made him great feast in his house". Matthew celebrated this memorable occasion by inviting all his friends to come and get acquainted with the Lord Jesus. Is it not a challenge to us to tell friends of the Saviour?

The Pharisees who were con-stantly watching Jesus asked his disciples why their Master should eat with sinners. For anyone to talk or sit with sinners who talk or sit with sinners who practiced the laws of purification, was an act of defilement. Jesus put them to silence with the words "They that be whole need not a chemical transfer of the silence with the words that the silence with the words that the silence with the words that the whole need not a chemical that the whole need not a But there are many who consider themselves whole as the pharisees did, and know not that they are "wretched, and miserable, and

"Go ye and learn" was a rebuke to those who prided themselves in their education and knowledge of the scriptures. Jesus refers them to Hos. 6:6, where the prophet taught that God loved mercy more than sacrifice. Jesus goes on to state his purpose "Not to call the righteous, but sinners to repen-tance. Of course this included 11, as "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God."

The Pharisees had come to criticize, but this ruler came for help and to worship Jesus. He recognized the fact that even though the child might be dead, a touch of the Master's hand was sufficient to restore her. On His way to where the child lay a woman of similar faith who had been suffering for many years touched the hem of his gument and was instantly healed Arriving at the home of the ruler, they found that the girl had been pronounced dead, and many friends had gathered. When Jesus mentioned that she only sleepeth, they ridiculed him. God cannot work in an atmosphere of scorn, and not until they were put out did Jesus restore the child to players so unconscious of it all

Last Saturday was such a lovely day—a day that was good to be out in—so I announced my intention of walking to town. Partner laughed "You won't walk very far," he said. "Why not?" I inquired.

"Well, have you forgotten there's a political convention in town today? There will be cars by the dozen on the road!".

Sure enough I had hardly left our own gate when I was offered a ride. And I don't mind telling you I was called to accept it because I was glad to accept it because I was carrying five dozen eggs and already they were much heavier than when I left home. I didn't know my Samaritan driver at all — and I didn't inquire whet-her he was Liberal or Tory it was enough for me that he was a gentleman and with a young boy along to satisfy the proprieties.

We got to town, and my goodness, you wouldn't think there were any bad roads in the country, that is, judging by the number of cars on the street. They were parked from one end of town to the other. But I had little time to waste so I hurrieid along, did my shopping, had a cup of tea with a and was then ready for home.

Just as I got back to Main Street, party satellites were coming away from the Town Hall. I went into one of the stores to pick up a few parcels and what a kick I from my hide-out!

Now I wouldn't go so far as to say I could tell which of the
