

GERMAN SUBMARINE SURRENDERS

The U-859, Nazi submarine, proceeds to Shelburne, N. S. under escort of a Canadian vessel after coming to the surface to surrender. An R.C.A.F. Liberator first spotted the submarine and arranged for its seizure.

CANADIANS BAG TOP-NOTCH NAZI

Formerly Chancellor of Austria Reich Commissar to the Netherlands in 1940, Seyss Inquart arrives by plane at First Canadian Army H. Q. Arrested by Canadian Provost Corps Lt.-Col. G. W. Bell, Edmonton, Alta., the prisoner is a former Deputy Governor of Poland and Instigator of Atrocities.

CAPTURED

Dr. Walter Funk, above, president of the Reichsbank, and Hitler's minister of economics, was among 200 Nazi government officials captured by U. S. Seventh Army. A dyed-in-the-wool Nazi, Dr. Funk tried desperately to win South America over to Hitler's side and is credited with pulling the Balkans into the Nazi economic orbit.

'GANGSTERS'

Following his capture at Rammstein, Germany, Gen. Nikolaus von Falkenhorst, former Wehrmacht commander in Norway, declared the Allies have liberated Germany from a "system of gangsters" and that the German army knew all along it couldn't beat the United States.

The Great German Port of Hamburg

The Canadians are calling on Hamburg, the great seaport of Germany, writes W. L. Clark, in The Winsor Star. It is a sprawling city, which has its streets running along the edges of inlets from the sea. The main harbor is a huge expanse of docks and warehouses. The city is an intricate pattern of rivers and water routes. Hamburg is a city where a motorist can get lost in no time. Short streets that run smack into a river or canal make driving confusing. We recall once getting so lost in the maze of Hamburg streets, we finally had to get a native with a bicycle to ride in front to guide us to our destination. And, even that was not so easy, because he forgot that a car cannot always be driven through narrow passages that present no difficulty for the cyclist.

Hamburg has been one of the important water terminals in Europe. Ocean traffic from the world ports arrives at Hamburg, while river and canal traffic connects with the intricate systems of inland waterways that extend through Germany.

To capture Hamburg means that the Canadians have taken one of the greatest prizes of the war against the Reich.
