

BIG WELCOME FOR THOUSANDS CANADIAN SOLDIERS

Along the hundreds at the docks cheering the return of thousands of Canadian servicemen on the big liner, S.S. Louis Pasteur at Quebec City last week was Defence Minister McNaughton. General McNaughton was among the first to board the ship and welcome the boys home. (Top). General McNaughton is shown waving his hat to the men as the ship pulled into dock. With him are left to right, Lt. Col. A. Cote, District Chaplain (RC); Brig. E. A. Blais, (behind Gen. McNaughton's arm); Major General H. Young, Quartermaster General and Lt. Col. Paul Triquet, V.C. (Bottom) Troops pack the portside of the Pasteur for eager glimpses of their homeland, after several years overseas while the tugs play streams on the troopship.

SIGN OF THE TIMES FOR THE JAPS

There was more truth than workers realized in the sign above, adjacent to the Oak Ridge, Tenn., plant of the Clinton Engineering Works, where atomic bombs are manufactured. Studying it at right are MP Sgt. Al Spinozola of New York and Cpl. Andrew Masrop of Dupont, Ill.

CHAPTER XV
"Not so hard for me as for you—for your good aunt. Once, when we first heard from the children about—about him, we said, make sense and I, that we would not believe the story unless we had the evidence of our eyes, our own ears. Unless we saw him, heard him confess his guilt. And we saw and heard."

"Yes. It was the same way with me." Roger stirred restlessly and lit a cigarette when she declined one. "I knew Mike well enough to realize that he would side with the devil—if he thought the devil was right. But how he strayed into this—this horrible business is more than I can fathom. What reward could they give him? Money he never cared for and fame never bothered him. He has cast aside his birthright, his self-respect, everything. I have often thought of those renegade Englishmen who broadcast over the German radio and to me they seemed mere crackpots who were to be laughed at or pitied. You can't laugh at Mike—and he could never be an object of pity. He is one who knows what it's all about."

"It was all so strange," whispered Meridel. "So different from the memory I had of him. When I met him there long ago he was so young and carefree and there was something in his eyes that was beautiful and good to see. But tonight, Roger—you saw his eyes tonight."

"No, no, I dreamed of him. He was alive again. He was smiling at me and holding out his hand to me and to Rosine. Tell me about the prisoners, Roger, please."

"Not now, my little one. Some other day, perhaps. Now it is time for all of you to have breakfast. Today if you like we shall go up into the mountain."

"That will be good, Roger," said Pol Martin gravely. "A lot of fun."

"I shall be waiting, mon brave," she said gravely. "I shall pray each hour for you—for your safe return."

"Less than nothing. If—if you want me, I will marry you, Roger."

"Want you! More than I have ever wanted or even could want anything else in this world."

"But you are not quite happy, because it came to you this way."

"I think I would rather have lost the game than have won it this way—through knowing the truth about Michel. But I see no reason why that should spoil our lives, our happiness."

Roger did not go to bed that night. He drew his chair to the window and dozed there a while and awoke to see the red-gold fur-sack in the eastern sky. As soon as he heard a noise below stairs, he shaved himself and showered.

LITTLE DID HE THINK

When prospector Gilbert Labine, right, flew his plane over Great Bear Lake in 1930 and found a rich pitchblende deposit only a few miles from the Arctic Circle, little did he think his discovery would play an important part in production of the atomic bomb. The Canadian government took over the mine, location of which is shown on the map. The uranium derived from the pitchblende ore was used to make the bomb that helped to launch Japan out of the war. Only other known deposits are in Belgium Congo, South America and Australia. One of factors which kept Germany from perfecting its atomic bomb was that none of these sources of uranium was available to them.

Granny Prescribed Black Currant Tea

Grandma was a pretty smart old lady. She didn't know that black currant juice was chock full of vitamin C, but she did know that when the children began to sniffle and sneeze a cup of hot black currant tea would "fix them up, right smart."

It took the nutritionists quite a long time to discover that black currants are the very best source of this important vitamin, but they know it now. Further, the division of nutrition at Ottawa has figures which show that black currants are still an excellent source of vitamin C after being made into jam.

"The people who grow or can buy black currants should count themselves lucky," say the nutritionists. Their figures show that two tablespoons of black currant jam will give about the same amount of vitamin C as an orange at less cost.

Flies 555 Miles In 62 Minutes

Travelling nearly as fast as sound, a jet-propelled P-80 "Shooting Star" roared in from Dayton, Ohio, and hissed to a stop at La Guardia field recently after covering the 555 miles in one hour and two minutes.

The streamlined craft described by the army as the world's fastest, touched the runway an hour and 34½ minutes after leaving Wright Field, Dayton. The pilot, Col. William H. Council, said the extra 32 minutes were taken up by landing preparations.

The jet-propelled fighter flew most of the way at 20,000 feet because of adverse weather. Its top speed has been announced as more than 550 miles an hour and its ceiling as at least 45,000 feet.

CHRONICLES of GINGER FARM

By Gwendoline P. Clarke

Concentrating on one's own work has been almost impossible these last few days. Biked up with harvest and home activities are thoughts—and fears—of the awful possibilities of atomic bombing. It grips one's imagination, sends shivers down the spine—and is so utterly fantastic as to be almost unbelievable. Comments from the press, pulpit and public have also been thought provoking—especially those which assert atomic bombing to be inhuman. There is no doubt that such bombing is, of necessity, inhuman but one should also remember that it must be either they, or us, and if the use of atomic bombs serves to bring about the end of the war then surely their use is justified.

What our men have been through under shell fire and as prisoners of war is bound to have its effect in the immediate future. There will be times when they will be irritable, restless, and moody. I know because I went through it after the last war. This is a different war, and a different generation, but fundamentally, cause and effect are the same. The men have done their part and, for those who return, whether they are able to adjust themselves to peacetime conditions, depends largely upon the women in their homes. A woman who matches her husband's irritability with more of the same cannot expect a very happy future; nor can the woman who drags her man around against his will with the idea of giving him "a good time" and helping him to forget.

I don't suppose many young married folk read this column but if there are a few war brides who do, let me beg of you to have patience with that returned man of peace.
