Churchill Wielded Too Much Power?

One reason given for the defeat of Winston Churchill is that the former Prime Minister had acquired too much personal power through his leadership in the war, comments the Windsor Star. It is a trait of the English people that they dislike seeing anyone approach the position of a dictator.

Although Mr. Churchill may neither have wished to be nor was a dictator, there is no doubt about the great power he wielded.

In war the people followed his leadership, but once the crisis against Germany had ended, the people decided it was time to end any individual, even Mr. Chur-

Lights Go Out Again In London

Britain, which happily wel-comed sparkling lights when Gernany was defeated, now watches the blackout creep back.

Darkened streets are part of the austerity program the British peo-ple have been told they must expect to continue in greater or less degree for perhaps two years. After the splurge of bright lights in celebration of peace, shortages of electrical power and gas have made in the opinion of the government
