PARTY PUP

A dog's life isn't so bad for the pup parked in cop's cap, above, after touring New York cafes with a soldier and civilian who "liberated" him by tossing a crate through a pet shop window. The three were going from bar to bar when police showed up. The "liberators" face a burglary charge, although only the pup was taken from the shop.

Fortune Found In Jap Coop

Allies Discover Fortune In Diamonds

American searchers have found fortunes in diamonds, platinum, gold and silver which Japanese admirals and generals had cached in secluded areas—but never were able to remove from the country because the war ended so abruptly.

General MacArthur's headquarters disclosed that one party discovered "a fabulous fortune in diamonds" in a chicken coop atop a mountain 160 miles north of Tokyo. In another instance a package resembling a packet of hamburger yielded 5,000 karats of diamonds.

No estimates of the value of the loot have been made.

Eleven crates of platinum were discovered beside the chicken coop. The Japanese admirals' aides guided Americans to the cache.

The trip up the mountain in a pouring rain with those Japanese was one of the most fantastic

Men who think of tomorrow
GUARD AGAINST INFLATION Today!

Old Man Inflation stands just around the corner ready to snatch at your pay envelope and short-change you in return. It happened after 1918, and it can happen again.

It's strange but true that the only ones who can save us from inflation—excessively high prices—are ourselves. It's spending those extra dollars that bids up prices on everything that's still scarce. And once started, inflation spreads like a forest fire to everything we use or consume. So let's fight the temptation to spend unnecessarily. Let's put every extra dollar into Victory Bonds and hold onto the Bonds we already have.

Think of tomorrow... and you'll agree the thing to do is not to cash Victory Bonds but to go and buy more!

things that can be imagined," said Capt. L. K. Ward, Interlocken, N.J., who led the party. "It took all day and we got to the little farm at 10:30 at night. We were met by the best dressed Japanese in that part of the country. He wore a pin stripe suit, two tone shoes, a snappy tie and a fine white shirt. He said he was a caretaker, but he simply was guarding that stuff for those admirals."

Li-Col. Emmanuel Franklin, Rockville Center, N.Y. finance officer at MacArthur's headquarters, said: "We are finding fortunes in caves all the way from 100 to 200 miles from Tokyo. "I believe Japanese army and navy officials got this gold in China and elsewhere and did not tell the proper government agencies about it. "Bullion has been turned up in homes, colleges, a professor's warehouse, and nondescript shacks. Plots of unguarded ground also yielded wealth."

"SALADA" TEA

DARK LIGHTNING
By HELEN TOPPING MILLER

CHAPTER V

Instantly, old Huhney extricated himself from the confusion of his bedding. His sunken, dead-black eyes began to gleam. He claved at Gary's arm, jerked him inside, and slammed the door.

"Don't let none of them folks around here," he warned. "Set 'em down, I got a map. But I'm keeping it. What you want with it?"

"I'm studying the structures around here. Thought maybe you'd let me look at your map. You know this country pretty well, do you?"

"Know it?" shrilled an old man, yelling out a drawer from a lopsided chest and fumbling feverishly in it. "I know every fold and fault and seam in it. Walked every foot of it. Son, you can look at my map, but there ain't no oil under this county, not a drop."

He straightened, brought out a packet carefully wrapped in oil-cloth and secured with a tightly knotted shoestring. Slowly, almost reverently, he untied the knot. A roll of slippery maps slid out, unsecured themselves, grease-spotted and faded.

"Got 'em all here?" Old Huhney dropped on a stool and spread the soiled sheets over his knees. "Here she is. Look 'a here." He traced with a long and filthy fingernail the Sabine uplift—where they found the big pool—and over here there ain't nothing. Lime and salt water, I tell you. And you ain't got no oil. You got a map, but there ain't no oil. There was an uplift—but to the north of it's fault—and on the edge of that—his breath began to quicken a little.

"Thanks, Mr. Fothergill." He handed the map back. "Here—buy yourself some tobacco. You're

CHRONICLES of GINGER FARM

By Gwendoline P. Clarke

We have just come back from the County Ploughing match. We were all there—Partner, the two boys and myself. It was a glorious day, fine and warm, the first day in years. Last year's raised, or been cold and rough for this big county event. It was also the first time I had ever gone to a ploughing match and I found it well worth the trip.

The boys went early in the forenoon, Partner and I followed soon after dinner—just in time to see the big bulldozer at work. And how it worked! What was a bulldozer doing at a ploughing match? Well, you see this affair was more than a ploughing match—thanks to enterprising men within the county. It was also a demonstration and exhibition of labour-saving machinery, and, while a bulldozer can hardly be classed as a necessary piece of equipment on a hundred acres, it might find use on a farm where a bulldozer could be put to good use—thus the demonstration, the idea being that a group of farmers might find out a little more about them to bring a bulldozer in to work for them.

On this particular farm where the match was held the machinery was lined up in a pasture field. In the field there was a huge stump from which an elm tree had recently been felled. It isn't necessary for me to tell you the work involved in prying a green stump from its moorings. No doubt you have seen the men on your farm working with picks, shovels, axes and even dynamite for days at a time. But on this stump the bulldozer went to work. It gouged out the dirt from around the stump; it cut through its confining roots; it groaned and whined against the resisting fibres, while a ring of men, women and boys looked on in breathless expectancy. "By Jimmy, that there stump will take some waltzing," one fellow said. "Just moving" — I'll do it," said another. Fascinated I formed my way to the front of the ring and from this vantage point I noticed that at first the stump was as solid and defiant as a rock. And then, slowly but surely it started giving a little. Came the time when it started from the impact of the huge steel monster, and then gradually gave way before its repeated onslaughts. Finally the crowd could see the base of mechanism against the sky was just about won. Two or three more gigantic shoves and the great root was pushed over and
