

JAPS LOST FACE— AND ARMS, TOO

Demolition of 7,000,000 Jap troops, accomplished recently with unprecedented speed by General MacArthur's forces, has necessitated collection and tabulation of enormous stores of enemy weapons, as illustrated in photos above. At upper left, Jap officer assists an American in checking off airplanes at Utsunomiya airfield. Frequenters have been removed as provided in surrounding terms. At top right, Lt. Charles Dorick of McKeesport, Pa., prepares to inspect one of thousands of rifles displayed in racks at Utsunomiya arsenal. The GI at lower left obviously enjoys carrying to his outfit's trophy room an armload of ornate samurai swords, the symbols of Jap militarism. At lower right, an officer from a special U. S. Ordnance unit lists some of the captured field pieces.

CHAPTER VI
He said, "What's this picture?" and his voice was hoarse and strange. Gary caught the tension, and looked across at Mona Lee with eyes that were a little sorry. "It's a rough idea of the geological structure under this ranch, sir," he said. "I looked it up today on an old map that Hughie Fothergill owns—after I'd found what I thought were surface indications up there in that gulch above the pasture. This map shows a promising structure, that's all." He went over it all then, marking out lines with a pencil on the sketch.

"What you're getting at is that this land is the kind of land they find oil under," Harvey put in. "That's what all this scientific stuff means?"
"It means that this land is the kind that oil might be found under," Gary qualified, definitely. "I'm not making any statements. Only a competent geophysicist could give you reliable advice. They have the knowledge and the instruments—I'm just a beginner. I've studied the stuff but never had an opportunity to work at it."

"Mona Lee could see Harvey fidgeting in his chair. Then he jumped up to that place now? I've got a flashlight. And there's a moon. Want to go, Mother?"
"I guess not... well, if you're all going trailing out there like crazy, I might as well go along."
They tramped through the pasture, a strange procession, Adelaide skipping ahead and Gary and Harvey behind her. The beam of Harvey's flashlight went scorchingly ahead. He carried a spade and a cloth sack thrown over his shoulder. And when they arrived at last at the little canyon he began digging immediately, tossing lumps of rock and earth into the sack that Adelaide held open.

CHRONICLES of GINGER FARM

We thought that winter was upon us this morning but then a warm sun appeared, snow vanished, the hard ground softened and we rejoiced in a reprieve from winter, no matter how brief it may prove to be.
I think all of us welcome spring and summer and we glory in the grandeur of the autumn season, but winter... well, that's something else again. Of course, the very young think in terms of sleigh rides and snowball fights; teen-agers of hockey, dances and skating parties, while to staid middle-agers it means problems concerning storm windows and coal bins. Storm windows... I don't want to see or touch any and take charge and I don't mind looking through them. You see, way back in the summer of '44 we ordered five new storm windows. They were delivered on a cold rainy day last December—unpainted, of course. We never got them on at all. They were just left in the storeroom. About September 1 began to think they really should be painted if they were to go on the house this fall. Thinking was as far as I got—that is until the end of October. Then my conscience wouldn't let me rest any longer—those windows would have to be done.

Have you tried painting new storm sash? Do you know what a slow job it can be? If you have, then unless you are a magician, you know you can paint only one side at a time—and with two coats of paint that means wrestling with the job four different times—or more, if you are interrupted. Your eyes tire, your feet ache and you continually find yourself painting the glass as well as the woodwork. On one of these occasions son Bob volunteered to help. I accepted gladly—until I found it took me longer to clean off the smears on the glass than it did to paint! May we painters, like poets, are born and not made. As to that I don't think I was born a painter either. Came the day when the windows were finished, also the arrival of a carpenter to fit them—and there was I getting dinner and running around ahead of the carpenter to clean windows before the storm sash was put on. Why didn't I clean them before? Because I don't like doing the same job over again. Clean windows ahead of time and as sure as anything it rains in the night leaving them woefully streaky. There was no use looking to the men for help; they were busy enough drawing in red clover seed.

Eventually the windows were on—old as well as new—and that same night the wind whined and howled, and rattled the shutters from one end of the house to the other. I lay in bed listening to it, feeling more thankful every minute.

TABLE TALKS..
Satisfying Suppers
The habits and preferences of a nation are supposed to be reflected in the nursery rhymes. If this is true, food must take first place in man's thoughts for Little Miss Muffet, Jack Horner and a lot of others concentrate on the subject. Tommy Tucker sang for plain bread and butter, and your family should certainly sing loudly when you serve any of these recipes from the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture.
Tomato Barley Casserole
¼ cup barley (about 2 ¼ cups cooked)
2 ½ cups boiling water
3 cups canned tomatoes
¼ cup sliced cooked carrot
¼ cup sliced raw onion
1 teaspoon minced parsley
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon celery salt
¼ cup grated cheese
¼ cup bread crumbs
Cook barley in boiling water, 20 minutes. Mix with tomatoes, carrots, onions, parsley and seasonings. Pour into a casserole. Bake in a moderately hot oven, 375 deg. F. for 35 minutes. Sprinkle with cheese, cover with bread crumbs. Return to the oven for 10 minutes. Six servings.
