quarrel that had sent Craig from the apartment. It had been a blow to his pride from the day of their wedding that Janet should continue working. She enjoyed her position in the advertising firm where she had risen from a clerk to copy writer in just two years. Since she left the house after Craig in the morning and returned before him at night, she never felt her working interfered in any way with her household duties. But friends had spoiled everything with their snide remarks about "poor Janet still working," and it was more than Craig could bear. "They think I can't support you!" he'd storm at her, but the more he pleaded the more adaman; she and become. And now he was

The whole thing seemed so un important now. She glanced at the telephone, half-inclined to call him home, but her own recalcitrant nature refused to allow such a move. She turned on the radio instead and pretended the tears that welled in her eyes at the strains of "Silent Night" were merely tears of weariness after the preparation of the office party morning. Deliberately . she opened the dresser drawer to put away last night's ironing. souvenir box loomed temptingly before her. Lifting the cover, she stared at the items she had col-lected: Craig's class ring, exthanged for a diamond after their graduation from college; a pressed orchid, one of those she had carried at her wedding; various cards, Christmas, anniversary, birthday, valentine. She picked up a small gift card and read again. To my dear wife, Janet & ur first Christmas." It was the card with the watch he had given

Trembling, she closed the box and turned quickly from the dress-She had been a fool, she desided. Without Craig, Christmas could never hold the same meaning for her as it once had. She didn't stop to lock the door for there was nothing of value anyne could steal from her. Even her $100 Christmas bonus lying on the table went unnoticed. The one thing she must not lose was appiness, and that was no longer

She hurried into her coat as she started breathlessly down the 31/2 lights of stairs. Tears coursed lown her cheeks and she prayed with fanatic zest that she was not too late. As she reached the last flight of stairs, she crashed into figure who was hurrying up, as oblivious of his surroundings as she. She gasped at the impact, out the man quickly regained hi balance and caught her before she could fall, "Janet!" he cried.

belief. Then, throwing her arms about him she gave vent to her tears. "Oh, Craig! Darling, I was just coming for you."

He kissed her and held her tightly. "Janet, I've been such a fool. I didn't realize until tonight what an awful thing pride can be. Will you ever forgive me? She sighed. "There's nothing to forgive, Craig. I was the one who was wrong. I'm going to quit my job right away."

She looked at him almost in dis-

"No, you mustn't. I don't want to deprive you of any happines and if you want to work, I'm not going to stop you."

She laughed shakily. "We'll argue that out later, shall we? Arm in arm they climbed up the stairs.

How A Briton Spends His Money

Some interesting figures showing how Britons spend their money are given by Dr. R. F. Rattray of Cambridge. Out of every pound the British people spend on goods and services he says that five shillings is for food, two shillings five pence for alcoholic drinks, two pence for tobacco, one shilling 10 pence for clothing one shilling 91/2 pence for rent and rates. 11 pence for fue and light, 10 pence for travel, 61/2 pence for entertainment and 31/2 pence for reading matter.

But last week he took to his bed - only not that quick. For a day, or two he insisted on going to the barn — thinking like the rest o us do, that the heavens would fall i we don't throw in our two cents worth to keep 'em up. In the end he had to give in and the feedin of the cows and poultry depended then upon the tender mercies the boys. One day the young cattle did quite a bit of jumping around much to Bob's bewilderment— until he realized he was still wear-

The poultry was another worry Bob looked after them before break fast but he didn't realize how much attention they required during th day, so I was always shouting from the backdoor — "Pick up the eggs before you come in." One night the boys forgot to take a last look I forgot to remind them - so the were six eggs frozen and cracked. If Partner had been on the job that wouldn't have happened.

As for me I have been busy in th house - busy with my usual wor plus caring for Partner. But a soon as he was able Partner wa anxious to do things to help me So yesterday I said — "All right I'm going to make some pies - vou can peel the apples." It wasn't lon before I saw Partner sort of straightening his back, even thoug he was sitting. Presently he said -"Good-night, how many pies ar you making — haven't I pecled enough apples yet?" I laughed as I answered — "Now maybe you'll understand why I think there is quite a bit of work to making apple pies. And you will notice they take

We see reason, however, why the Pacific League shouldn't he raised to major status for Post Season purposes only. A Super World Series in November or early December, played in the far West, would draw like a poultice. If the Westerners lost it would make no difference. If they happened to win, the National or American League applogists could shrug it off with, "Just one of those things — our guys didn't take it seriously'.

Players on other National Hockey League teams say that the Toronto Maple Leafs are far harder to beat on a Saturday night — when they know that the ears of all the great coast-to-coast radio audience arefollowing their actions - than they are, even on home ice, in a midweek game. But some of that sort of comment may be put down to professional jealousy.

But here's a rather peculiar angle. Last year the Maple Leafs were the best team in the loop - if not over a whole season's play, at least when the chips were down at the finish. This year, on what they've shown they look good enough to take the League title and repeat for the Stanley Cup. And yet — and yet in their last 13 games in the city of Boston, covering quite a long stretch of time, they haven't been able to come away with even a single victory. Must be that salt Boston air
