NOTICE -To Markdale Fishermen

For many years I have invited you to use my trout stream as my guests.
The last few years the fish have been noticeably smaller and less plentiful.
When this condition occurs the remedy is to close the stream for a season It is hoped that, as a result, you will enjoy better fishing in 1949. Inci-dentally, I went fishing one day last year and caught one small trout—but not smaller than 7 inches.—I. B. Lucas.

The Unity of Anglers We are the ones who love to go Where flowers bloom and streams flow;

A hearty lot of husky men Of various views and habits, when We leave our homes on pleasure bent, But unified in one intent As anglers!

We have our different lures to take The denizens of stream or lake; The murd rous plug, the dainty fly The most seductive bait we try: Some use the lowly, worm, content
To go with hearts on pleasure bent
As anglers!

We of various ages, too, Some youthful, beardless; not a few Have lived beyond man's normal span. But time has not destroyed, nor can The zest of life in boy or man

So bless we all our God, who gives The world in which the angier lives!
With eagerness we wait the day
When we may sally forth to play.
Come with us on the Opening Day

To angle!
