The forums were quite satisfied with the CBC network, with its good market reports, farm forum broadcasts, world and local news. They believed in some cases news broadcasts could be made at a more suitable time for the farmer.

Rev. Graham took his audience on a ramble about "the aud sod" Ireland where he was born and grew up. He began the journey by taking them to places of interest not far from his old home in the north to scenes with old home in the north to scenes with which he was familiar, the ruins of a church three miles away, and to see a Druid altar which he and his brother had once found buried in the woods; to the tiny seaport from which the man had sailed who founded the first Presbyters on this side of the Atlantic; he pointed out where the founder of the first Methodist community on this continent had its beginning on the Green Isle. With each place of interest he had associated some interesting he had associated some interesting reference, with often a joke or some Irish verse which he recited in a rich

He pointed out Belfast shipyards, which were a target for the bombers many times. He stopped in Dublin to tell of the famous Trinity College, and the Book of Calves. He told of those people in the south who are not so thrifty but are great on learning, and have poetry on the tip of their tongue. The Irish were proud to think of Barry Fitzgerald, the great actor, as being of Irish birth, and of Walt Disney, whose Irish ancestry probably explains his way with fairies.

In 1845-47 potatoes failed, and they faced famine, when shiploads of fever stricken people were brought across the Atlantic. This, the speaker said, may have been a blessing in disguise for they played a great part in the opening up of this America, and to-day some of the founders of the great business houses, and many others like D'Arcy McGee had played their part, and he hoped no son of Ireland would forget that land. Unfortunately, so many of our people have relaxed their vigilance that we are now on the verge of exceeding our quota, which has been increased three times. As a result of this increased use, further cuts are looming on the horizon. It is accordingly up to each one of us to conserve all possible power, if we are to avoid the inconvenience of more black-outs.

The Little Country Hospital

Last week Thos. L. Kennedy, Premier Last week Thes. L. Kennedy, Premier of Ontario, and a working farmer who has represented a farm community in the legislature for over 25 years, endersed the building of a new hospital in Oakville, which would serve not only the town but the prosperous farming district in Trafalgar township. An article which appeared in the December 4th issue of the Toronto Daily Star refers to the growing need for hospitals in rural communities, and the important work which they are capable of doing. In view of the interest in such a hospital in Centre Grey at the present time, we direct the attention present time, we direct the attention of our readers to the text of the article. It reads in part:

It reads in part:

"Throughout the province the need for hospitals is growing daily," Premier Kennedy said. "And nowhere is that need more acute than in farming communities." Firmly behind his leader is Hon. Russell T. Kelley, Health Minister, who has made a detailed study of the nospital facilities and needs of the province, and who applauded the project for a new hospital in Oakville. "Personally", Mr. Kelley said, "I would like to see our rural districts have all the advantages of city life. I think they should have good churches with fine ministers and priests. I think they should have the best of legal advice and dental service. I think they should have the best community centres and and dental service. I think they should have the best community centres and up-to-date theatres. "Most of all, I would like to see them provided with the best medical care and advice available. Oakville is the largest centre in the big farming area. The type of hospital proposed there would provide rural residents with the best of medical care."

The small hospital, the minister said, s a very important unit in the network is a very important unit in the network of medical centres across the province. "I have visited 110 of the 129 hospitals in Ontario," he said. "I know from personal study that the small hospital can give at least 80 per cent of medical services which can be provided by large medical institutions in large cities."

Then the minister reached into the inside pocket of his coat and pulled out a copy of a poem by Edgar Guest. The poem is entitled "The Little Country Hespital," "I think this sums up the way I feel about small hospitals," he said. "And I think it sums up the feelings of a great many people."

VANDELEUR

The Farm Forum met on Monday evening, Dec. 6th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Graham with a good attendance, and there was an interesting discussion on "Programs we hear on the radio." The members freely expressed their likes and dislikes with regard to programs, and made a number of suggestions for improvement. There was favourable comment on programs of an educational nature, such as farm forum, citizens' forum, farm broadcasts and news commentators. Good musical programs were also favoured, especially old time music, band music and bagning. oipes. Church services were enjoyed and also quizz programs. Others such as What's Your Beef, Kate Aitken. Clare Wallace, and our own "Tommy" Cooper were popular; the forum didn't like singing commercials, advertising slogans, soap operas, horror stories and jazz. It was felt that some of these should be taken off the air and commercials kept to a minimum. Billie Johnston, jr., presided, and two groups were formed with Mel Buchanan and Mrs. Alex. Gilray as secretaries. The balance of the evening was spent in crokinole, cards and indoor baseball, with Mr. D. McGee doing some sensational batting in the latter. Mel Buchanan, on behalf of the Forum, thanked Mr. and Mrs. Graham for their hospitality, and also congraphize the pitality, and also congratulated the former on heading the polls in the municipal elections.
