Measles

Measles is a child-killer. This disease which so many regard as of no seriousness and which is thought of as a necessary evil, accompanied by certain inconveniences, is, as a matter of fact, a serious menace to child life, and because of the number of children it kills, it ranks amongst those diseases that take life in early childhood.

In 1926, there occurred in Canada 893 deaths from Measles, of which 264 were children under one year of age. Most deaths from Measles occur under five years of age. The disease attacks especially those under three years. The older the child, the better the chance of recovery.

Measles is a communicable disease; it is passed from the sick to the well. It is very easily spread and practically all who are exposed contract the disease, unless they have been protected by a previous attack.

It is a mistaken idea that every child must have measles. It is criminal to expose children to measles, because to do so is to risk their lives.

Measles is serious not only it kills, but because it seems to prepare the ground for other diseases. It is the pneumonia following measles which makes it so dangerous. Tuberculosis may become active after measles.

Concerning the control of measles, it must be remembered that measles is most contagious during the days before the rash appears. For this reason, it is advised that every child with a cold in the head be kept away from other children, not only to prevent the spread of colds, but because the cold may be the first stage, the most contagious stage, of measles.

Part of the protection of child life is the protection of the child from measles.
