Tweed Travelling Coats
Take the Helm

You are on the crest of every wave when you sail away in a summer travelling coat of loosely-woven tweed. The wanderer is finding new coat adventures in novelty wools, cashmeres and swede fabrics. But the tide of interest is centered on tweeds. There's never a dull moment with this popular fabric that runs the gamut of colors and weaves, but light, uncertain hues often revealing yellow threads take the helm on the style boat.

Many models are furred as is the swagger model shown here. A straight line coae, pocketed and suffed offers protection from sea breezes with its shawl collar of lynx.

Embroidery Provides Festive Ornamentation

Embroidery comes back! But wait—this announcement doesn't herald the revival of the long-neglected work basket. It confides the gala news that an intriguing scheme for festive ornamentation is afoot—in fact, even at hand. Boasting its popularity in the summer wardrobe, embroidery appears at the most exclusive functions as a decorative note for slippers, bags and jackets as the sketches here reveal.

These heavy silk crepe slippers embroidered in flower design on heels and toes, employing contrasting pastel shades, happily complete a variety of summer costumes.

Songs

Song lies about us
On every hand,
Would we but listen
And understand.

Dawn has its voices,
Noontide and night
Come with their chorus
Chanting delight.

Dawn's songs of labor,
Dusk's songs of sleep,
Sound where the cities'
Great currents creep.

And in far woodlands
To lonely men
Come deeds and dreaming
With song again.

Rhythmic and restful
Vast pulses beat;
Would we but hearken,
Life's songs are sweet.

They err who think that suppliant words
Make prayer; that, winging up like birds,
They soar to some celestial place
To seek an all-absorbing grace
They err, for prayer means many things
That have no part in joyous wings

Who cooks a meal for friends to share,
Who scrubs a floor, may make a prayer
If in her humble task she finds
Some vestige of the love that binds
All men in unity of toil
Since Adam tilled primal soil.

Not only from a candled shrine
Must supplications incense twine;
But every kindly deed and thought
Of prayer's best essences is wrought.
Each task well done, each toil men share,
Becomes an offering of prayer.

Lockjaw or Tetanus

The disease Tetanus is commonly called Lockjaw because, when it occurs, the mouth becomes firmly fixed due to the rigid condition of the muscles of the jaw. The disease is caused by a germ whose entrance to the body is usually gained through a wound which tears the tissues of the body or which punctures them.

The germ of Tetanus has certain peculiarities. It grows best where there is no air, and so it thrives at the bottom of a punctured wound or in the depths of a lacerated wound where the air does not penetrate. This germ belongs to the group of germs which are able to form spores. The spore is a resistant state into which the germ goes when conditions for its living are unfavorable, and so in this state it is able to lie dormant for long periods of time. The spore becomes an active germ again when conditions are favorable, for example, when it is introduced into the human body through a wound.

The germ of Tetanus lives in the intestines of cows, horses and sheep. Any wound received on the farm, or any wound contaminated by dirt, particularly if the dirt is at all likely to contain manure, such as street dirt, is very likely to contain Tetanus germs. Any wound made by a nail or other piercing implement is the type of wound favorable for Tetanus. We may say that in any wound where dirt has been driven under the skin should be treated by a doctor.

Tetanus can be prevented. The wound should be properly cared for and, in addition, when there is any suggestion that it is the type of wound in which Tetanus is likely to occur, Tetanus antitoxin should be given. During the Great War, every man who was wounded received Tetanus antitoxin with the result that the disease was practically prevented. Preventive measures should always be taken, because if the disease is allowed to develop, the outlook is bad as far as treatment is concerned.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, will be answered. Questions as to diagnosis and treatment will not be answered.

Keep to the Right on Curves and Hills

Don't try to pass

You can't be safe if you persist in passing another car on a curve, or near the brow of a hill.

Before you attempt to pass another car, wait until you have a clear view of the road ahead, and make certain there is ample space for you in the traffic line.

On curves and hills, you can't see the road ahead, so always keep to the right.
