Fashion Fancies

A Winged Victory for the Decolletage

The decolletage achieves a winged victory with consummate grace and is making an early Spring flight over the world of evening fashions. The soft zephyrs of the night glance over white shoulders from which a fragile bit of lace may flutter to a line slightly below the normal waistline. Again, a deep decollete may divide two slender wings of the same material as the frock as illustrated in the gown above. The prevalence of pink evening gowns indicates that femininity has become conscious of the flattering effects of this shade. Here a delicate pink flat crepe has been chosen for the gown with its alluring winged decollete. The draped skirt is knotted at the back, below the hips, where it is divided to hang in folds on either side over a full skirt of even floor length.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Almo Mikaelis
Three
One found his days were hard, and so He laughed at want, he laughed at woe, He laughed at being's ebb and flow. "It shall not conquer me," he vowed, As wildly and with head unbowed, At life itself he laughed aloud.
Another, when loss fell to him, When Hatred showed its features grim, And Grief came, shadowy and dim, Crept to his corner, crouching there Like stricken beast within its lair, And gave himself to dark despair.
But of the three, one man was wise, And bravely to the sullen skies, He lifted clear, undaunted eyes. "By pain," said he, "we all are taught, By sorrow we are led to thought; Without its struggles, life is naught!"

In the Courtyard

Hidden away from the world are we,
Here in the courtyard cool;
Soft winds sing through the tulip tree,
Goldfish play in the pool.
It might be an old-world patio
Of a castle in Aragon,
This, where the tulip boughs bend low,
And the water gleams in the sun.
Perhaps should we pass through the lofty rooms
Out to the world that waits,
We might find a glamorous city blooms
Exotic, beyond the gates.
Perhaps we might hear the tinkling note
Of a softly-strummed guitar,
And, welling up from a dark-skinned throat,
Old songs of a moth and a star.
But why dream of the charm that distance lends,
The lure of the long-ago?
Why build these fancies of earth's far ends,
When love's bright blossoms blow
Here in the courtyard for you and me,
Where the fountain lifts its spray,
Where soft winds sing through the tulip-tree
And youth lives its joyous day!

Says India is Ripe For Christianity

Native Hindu Preacher Tells of Conditions in His Country, at United Church

That there is a great day dawning for India, that the missionary work carried on for the last two hundred years has opened the doors to Christianity in that country and that the time has come for the harvest, were among statements made by Rev. J. W. N. Netram, a native Hindu Christian teacher, who spoke in the United Church here on Sunday afternoon. He declared that converts to the Christian faith were being made at the rate of 2,000 a week and that this number could be doubled if there were men and money provided to take care of the people as they came forward to become Christians, and he made a strong plea for the increasing of the amount devoted by the Church in Canada towards missions in India.

In opening his address, Rev. Netram paid a tribute to what the Canadian Church has done for his country. In Central India, he said, there were now 6,000 Christian people, where a few years ago there had been none. He himself is a product of the Canadian mission work. He described the progress that is being made and some of the earlier experiences through which the people of India have passed in what he termed the shifting of the religious battlefield. In the earlier times, according to Mr. Netram, religious supremacy was based largely on antiquity, later it shifted to a comparison of civilization under Christianity with that under their own faith, and later still to a comparison of the personalities of Christ and Mahomet. Now, the speaker said, it is only a question of which of the religions gives the truest personification of Christ.

Mr. Netram did not go deeply into the political situation in India in his address in the Church. He stated, however, that of the 320,000,000 people in the country, there are 220,000,000 Hindus, 70 million Mohammedans and something over 5,000,000 Christians.

Religion is a big part in Indian life, he said, and there is no danger of the people becoming atheists. He had spent two days with Mahatma Ghandi before leaving for Canada and had discovered that the Christian religion was playing a part in the life of that stated that in one of Ghandi's leader. As an instance of this, he books, a sample of which the speaker had with him, there are six gospel hymns printed in English.

Rev. Netram gave other instances to prove that the spread of the Gospel in India is not falling on barren ground and concluded his sermon with an earnest appeal to the congregation to support the Church's missionaries in his country. There are men in Canada now on furlough, he said, who could not go back to India for lack of funds for their travelling expenses and support and the people there were ready to embrace the Christian faith if teachers and preachers were there to receive them.

There was a large congregation present to hear Rev. Netram, who appeared in his native Indian costume. He spoke in the Churches at New Liskeard and Cobalt and on Monday addressed the service clubs in the three towns. In his addresses on Monday he presented the political situation in India and gave some very interesting information on conditions in that troubled land at the present time.

The monthly meeting of the Women's Home and Foreign Mission Circle of the Baptist Church will be held on Thursday, June 12th at 3 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Geo. Sutherland, Blackwall St.

FIRST AID IN THE HOME

It is a good plan for every family to be prepared to deal with emergencies which may arise. In each home, there should be available the few articles which may be used with advantage in dealing with such emergencies. It is best to keep these articles properly labelled in a separate medicine cabinet, locked and out of the reach of children.

The following is a list of the articles for the first aid cabinet: A First Aid Outfit, containing sterile gauze and bandages, to be used in dressing cuts and wounds.

Aromatic spirits of Ammonia, two ounces. Give one-half teaspoonful in water in case of fainting.

Alcohol, rubbing, for use as a liniment to relieve pain in cases of sprains and strains.

Carbolated Vaseline, one tube. Use in the treatment of burns. Apply freely; cover with a piece of clean cotton and hold in place with a bandage.

Oil of Cloves. A drop or two on absorbent cotton, placed in the cavity of an aching tooth.

Boric Acid. Dissolved in water, may be used as a mild antiseptic wash or for making a compress.

Syrup of Ipecac. Use one teaspoonful, followed by a drink of warm water, to cause vomiting.

A roll of Absorbent Cotton, a pair of scissors, a clinical thermometer, safety pins, adhesive tape, and a medicine glass can be conveniently kept in the cabinet, and will be found useful in carrying out the instructions of the physician when there is illness in the home.

The above listing may seem to be very short to the person who is used to having shelves crowded with bottles. It is to be remembered that most minor illnesses do not require treatment with drugs. The most that the lay person should do while awaiting the arrival of the doctor is limited to a few things.

A severe illness is not threatened every time a member of the family complains of not feeling well, but a sick stomach, headache or chill may be the first warning of the onset of a severe illness.

The trained physician requires all his skill to determine the cause of his patient's symptoms and the proper treatment necessary. It is generally expensive and ineffective, if not actually dangerous, for the lay person to attempt to prescribe for himself.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.
