Coats Vie With Frocks in Omitting Sleeves

Interest in the new Summer coats is centred in the sleeves. Many of the most recent models reveal the cape treatment with sleeves omitted entirely. Another popular style is the sleeve of three quarter length shirred or tucked in a decorative, deep cuff.

Sheer fabrics fashion many of these coats with the material used in a double layer to lend body to the garment. If a cape is featured the material is used singly allowing the arms to show and lending a more summery air to the wrap.

A simple Summer coat of this type is shown above. Fashioned of pale green wool georgette it uses white pique for its collar in an effective contrast. The white kid belt and white buttons are effective details. And in this model you see how the elbow-length cape takes the place of sleeves. Godets add fullness and grace to the skirt.

A Sports Suits Features the Bolero

This season will go down in fashion history as the year in which designers devoted almost their entire ingenuity and originality to the suit. Never before have there been so many clever versions of this costume. Manishly tailored suits, soft and jaunty sports suits have all received their share of attention and the result has been a collection that has surpassed any previous presentation.

The sports suit sketched today advocates the bolero with standing collar developed in blue and white striped jersey. White jersey fashions the blouse, and the jabot which falls from the buttoned tab matches the bolero. Pleated circular insets lend interest to the navy skirt.

The City

Unceasing turmoil, endless striving here,
Where men of all degrees and races meet;
Confusion greets the quickened eye and ear
As sound and motion on the senses beat.

Is it a monster without kindly heart,
The city where Youth brings its all to spend,
Bearing rich gifts of patient skill and art
And asking only justice in the end?

It stands, instead a triumph shaped in stone,
Enduring long beyond the builders' time;
A challenge left by mighty men alone
To all who follow in their ways sublime.
And he who reads aright the city's soul
Finds inspiration there to gain his goal.

Put Them Aside

The thoughts of all you lost.
The vanquished dreams, the little hopes that died
Like pleasure boats, storm tossed,
Put them aside.

Put them aside,
The shadows that may be
In years to come, without Love's hand to guide;
Fear's clutch, doubt's agony,
Put them aside.

Cling but to this:
Hopes wane, but not your trust
You see dreams die, and yet life still holds bliss.
God's plans are wholly just;
None go amiss.

Put them aside,
All thoughts of fearful things
That leave your spirit's thirst unsatisfied,
The doubts that bind your wings
Put them aside!

"Lady of Snows" Gets Hot

Rudyard Kipling, poet of Empire and incidentally coiner of the phrase "Our Lady of the Snows" as a description of Canada, has now another view of the Dominion. Making a flying trip to this country he struck Montreal in the middle of a heat wave that boosted the thermometer into the nineties and made the poet wonder how he ever got the idea that Canada was

The bullet-torn body of Alfred "Jake" Lingle, a Chicago police reporter, lying on the sidewalk after he was shot and killed by a Chicago gangster in a sub-street under Michigan Avenue. Lingle specialized in stories of gangland activities and he was a close friend of Police Commissioner William F. Russell and other police officials. Lingle (inset) was personally acquainted with many of the leaders in the Chicago underworld.

The Baby in Summer

There are certain points which require attention during the warm weather in order to keep the baby healthy, to protect him from disease, and to make him comfortable. There are some conditions associated with hot weather which are apt to cause upsets and disease in the infant.

During the hot weather, a bath morning and night, is desirable. If the day is very hot, a cool sponge in the middle of the day will help to keep baby comfortable.

The baby should be dressed according to the temperature, not to the time of the year. His clothing should be varied from day to day and from day to night as the temperature changes. On a really hot day, a diaper alone, or a diaper and a thin sleeveless shirt are sufficient clothing.

Feedings should, of course, be just as regular in summer as at other times. The baby may not gain in weight during the hot weather, and he may take a smaller amount at his feedings, but as long as he is well, this need not be a cause for worry.

Babies become thirsty and, during the summer, they will take a considerable amount of water. Unsweetened boiled water should be offered to the baby at least once between feedings.

The baby is much more cool and comfortable when he is not being handled. Leave him alone to rest and to be quiet.

Keep all milk on ice so that it does not sour. Prepare all feedings exactly as ordered. Pasteurize all milk used.

On hot days, the baby should be kept in a shady spot and not be exposed to the sun excepting in the early morning or the late afternoon.

Insects carry disease germs as well as being a nuisance. The baby himself and his food should always be protected against flies and other insects. Screen the house. Cover the baby's crib and carriage with netting.

Summer diarrhoea is not nearly as common as it was a few years ago because of the better care which is now being given to babies. If it does occur, it should be dealt with at once. Stop all feedings; give as much unsweetened boiled water as the child will take, and place him under the doctor's care. Summer diarrhoea is a serious and often fatal condition unless properly and promptly treated.

If the baby is cared for in the manner indicated, there is no reason to dread the summer.
