AN UNWISE PRACTICE

That the giving of money to transient visitors is an unwise practice, and that very often it finds its way to the beverage rooms, is the statement of Chief of Police MacGirr.

Very often there are calls from these travellers, who are always either just out of jail or on their way to a job, and perhaps too often the sympathies of residents are prone to interfere with their judgment. Of recent years it has become something of a drain on the average citizen, who has to pay extra taxes to provide for the care of the unemployed in his own municipality, and the practice of calling around at the business places for a "little money to get something to eat" is all too prevalent.

The chief says that when applicants come to him they are seldom sent away without a meal. If they appear to be at all worthy they are fed, at the expense of the municipality, and at times given a place to sleep. This is a fairer way than for individuals to have to contribute whenever a call is made. While the handing out of a lunch or the provision of a meal by the individual must remain a matter of judgment, it is wise to remember the chief's warning about giving money. No one wants to help in quenching the thirst of a transient, however much he may be pitied.

LEARN TO SWIM

One of the best means of cutting down on the disastrous toll of deaths by drowning, which has already started this season, is the early training of the youth in the art of swimming. For several years past the local Rotary Club has been responsible for the holding of swimming classes at the bathing beach here, and much good work has been done. Children of the town have profited to a great extent from this instruction, but they need the encouragement of their parents in attending the classes.

It is the intention of the club to continue the classes this summer, starting soon after the closing of the school term. It is hoped and expected that a greater number of children will attend and learn to swim. The more swimmers there are, the fewer drownings there will be in the future. Expert instruction will be provided free of charge and all are welcome.

HOPE FOR RESULTS

The North Country in general is this week hoping for some definite results from the conference of Northern members of the Legislature with the Minister of Highways and engineers of the former Department of Northern Development held at North Bay on Tuesday. The lack of any definite road policy has been something of a handicap to the municipalities, who have missed the opportunities of sending unemployed men to work on the roads. At this time last year a number of local men had been placed on work of that nature, with the result that the relief issues had been materially lessened. This year, however, there has been no opportunity for men to secure employment and the municipalities in many cases are at their wits' end to know what to do, with the difficulties in providing for those out of work.

The conference was called for the express purpose of considering the needs of the North Country, especially since the taking over of the Department of Northern Development by the Department of Highways. It should result in the placing before the Minister a clear statement of conditions in the Northern districts, with the presentation of the North's needs by the various members, who are all thoroughly familiar with their own constituencies.

The Ottawa Spotlight

By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, Jun e2.—A new chapter in Canadian radio history appears to be opening with the recommendation of the radio committee, tabled a few days ago. This was, on the whole, the most vital news in a rather dull week. Legislation will be introduced in a few days which will abolish the present commission and set up a Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, very much along the lines of the set-up in Great Britain.

At present, of course, there are three highly paid commissioners, who divide the work and responsibility of direction between them. The committee which investigated the operations of recent years were rather critical of this type of organization. There had been laxity and divided control, they asserted.

The new Corporation would be headed by Nine Governors, representing all regional interests in Canada, and consisting of men "of broad outlook, having a real knowledge of the tastes and interests of the listening public and who can make a definite contribution to the solution of the problem before the corporation."

These men would serve for nominal salaries, actuated mainly by a spirit of public service, it is supposed. They would govern the general policy of radio in Canada.

The actual operation would, however, be controlled by a single able, highly paid executive, the general manager. This executive would have an assistant.

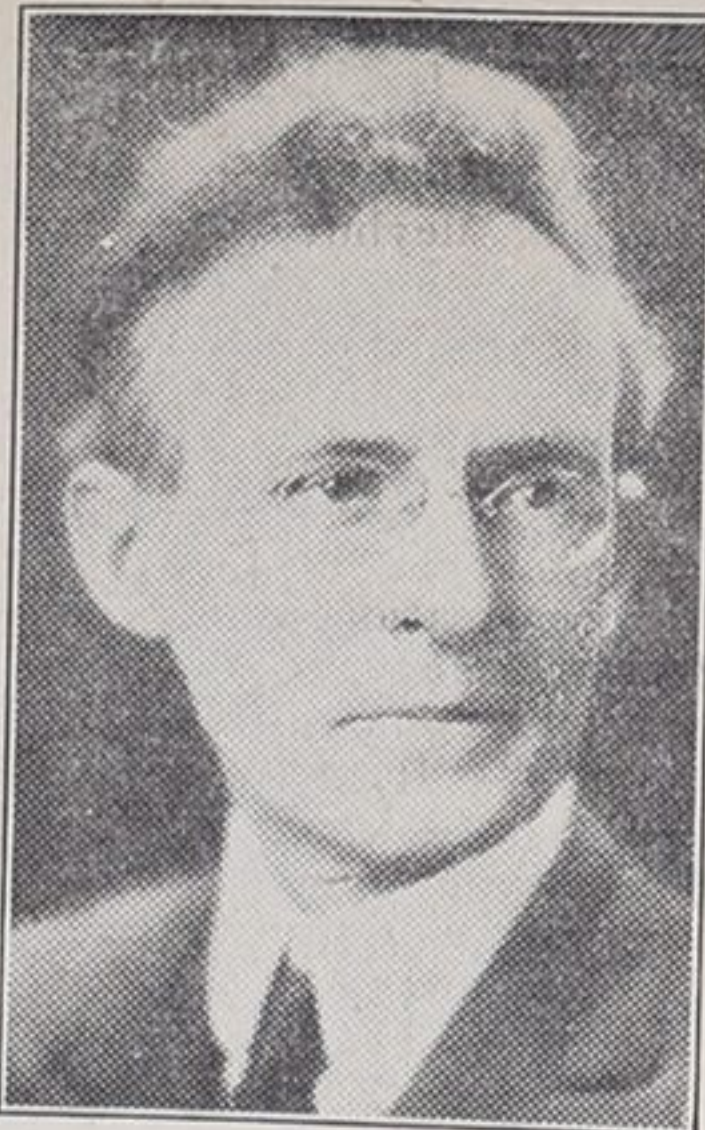

Suggest Major Murray Major Gladstone Murray, a Canadian who has risen to very high rank in the British Broadcasting Corporation, has been repeatedly mentioned for the new post. It is not yet clear whether he would be available.

Of course the mere change of management will not transform Canadian broadcasting into a close copy of the British broadcasting overnight, even if that were desirable. The Canadian corporation will be faced with a completely different situation. In Canada there are still numerous private broadcasting stations and while it is proposed to gradually absorb these, except for the very small ones, into the national system, they will continue for some time to be an important factor. Meantime, the recommendations of the committee are that programs issued by private stations should be under the supervision of the new corporation.

The government has already intimated that the committee's report was acceptable, and that the changes would be made.

The principle of national ownership of the radio broadcasting machinery was endorsed and reaffirmed by the committee. It was urged that steps be taken to improve and extend the present Canadian coverage. Realizing that the grant which the commission has been receiving out of the federal treasury has not been adequate for the building of as many new stations as are needed, the committee advised that the new corporation should be empowered to borrow up to $500,000 from the federal government for such a purpose.

In 1911, Mr. Kennedy founded the Canadian Academy of Music (now part of the Toronto Conservatory of Music) at the request of the late Sir Albert Gooderham, a noted patron of music in Canada for many years. Mr. Kennedy ranks high as an adjudicator at music festivals and as a lecturer on musical subjects.

If the corporation is set up as recommended, it will be free from party control in the matter of the engagement and dismissal of employees and their remuneration.

Criticize Political Broadcasts "Mr. Sage" and other political broadcasts of the last general election came in for some criticism by the committee, and it was urged that in future a stricter supervision of such broadcasts should be provided. The committee went so far as to recommend that no political dramatized broadcasts should be permitted in future.

The present commission will be automatically retired by the creation of a corporation, but it is expected that most of the personnel of the present commission headquarters, including one or more of the chiefs, will be absorbed into the new corporation.

The new corporation will have the power to publish papers, books, magazines, to acquire copyrights in literary, musical and artistic works, gramophone records, to collect news, etc., if the recommendations of the committee are fully implemented in the legislation.

This bill will be perhaps the major one still to come before the legislators. There is talk that the Bank of Canada Act will not be proceeded with this session. The revision of the elections and franchise machinery will not be proceeded with this session, except sufficiently to deal with by-elections.

Money Talks

—But you must tell it what to say!

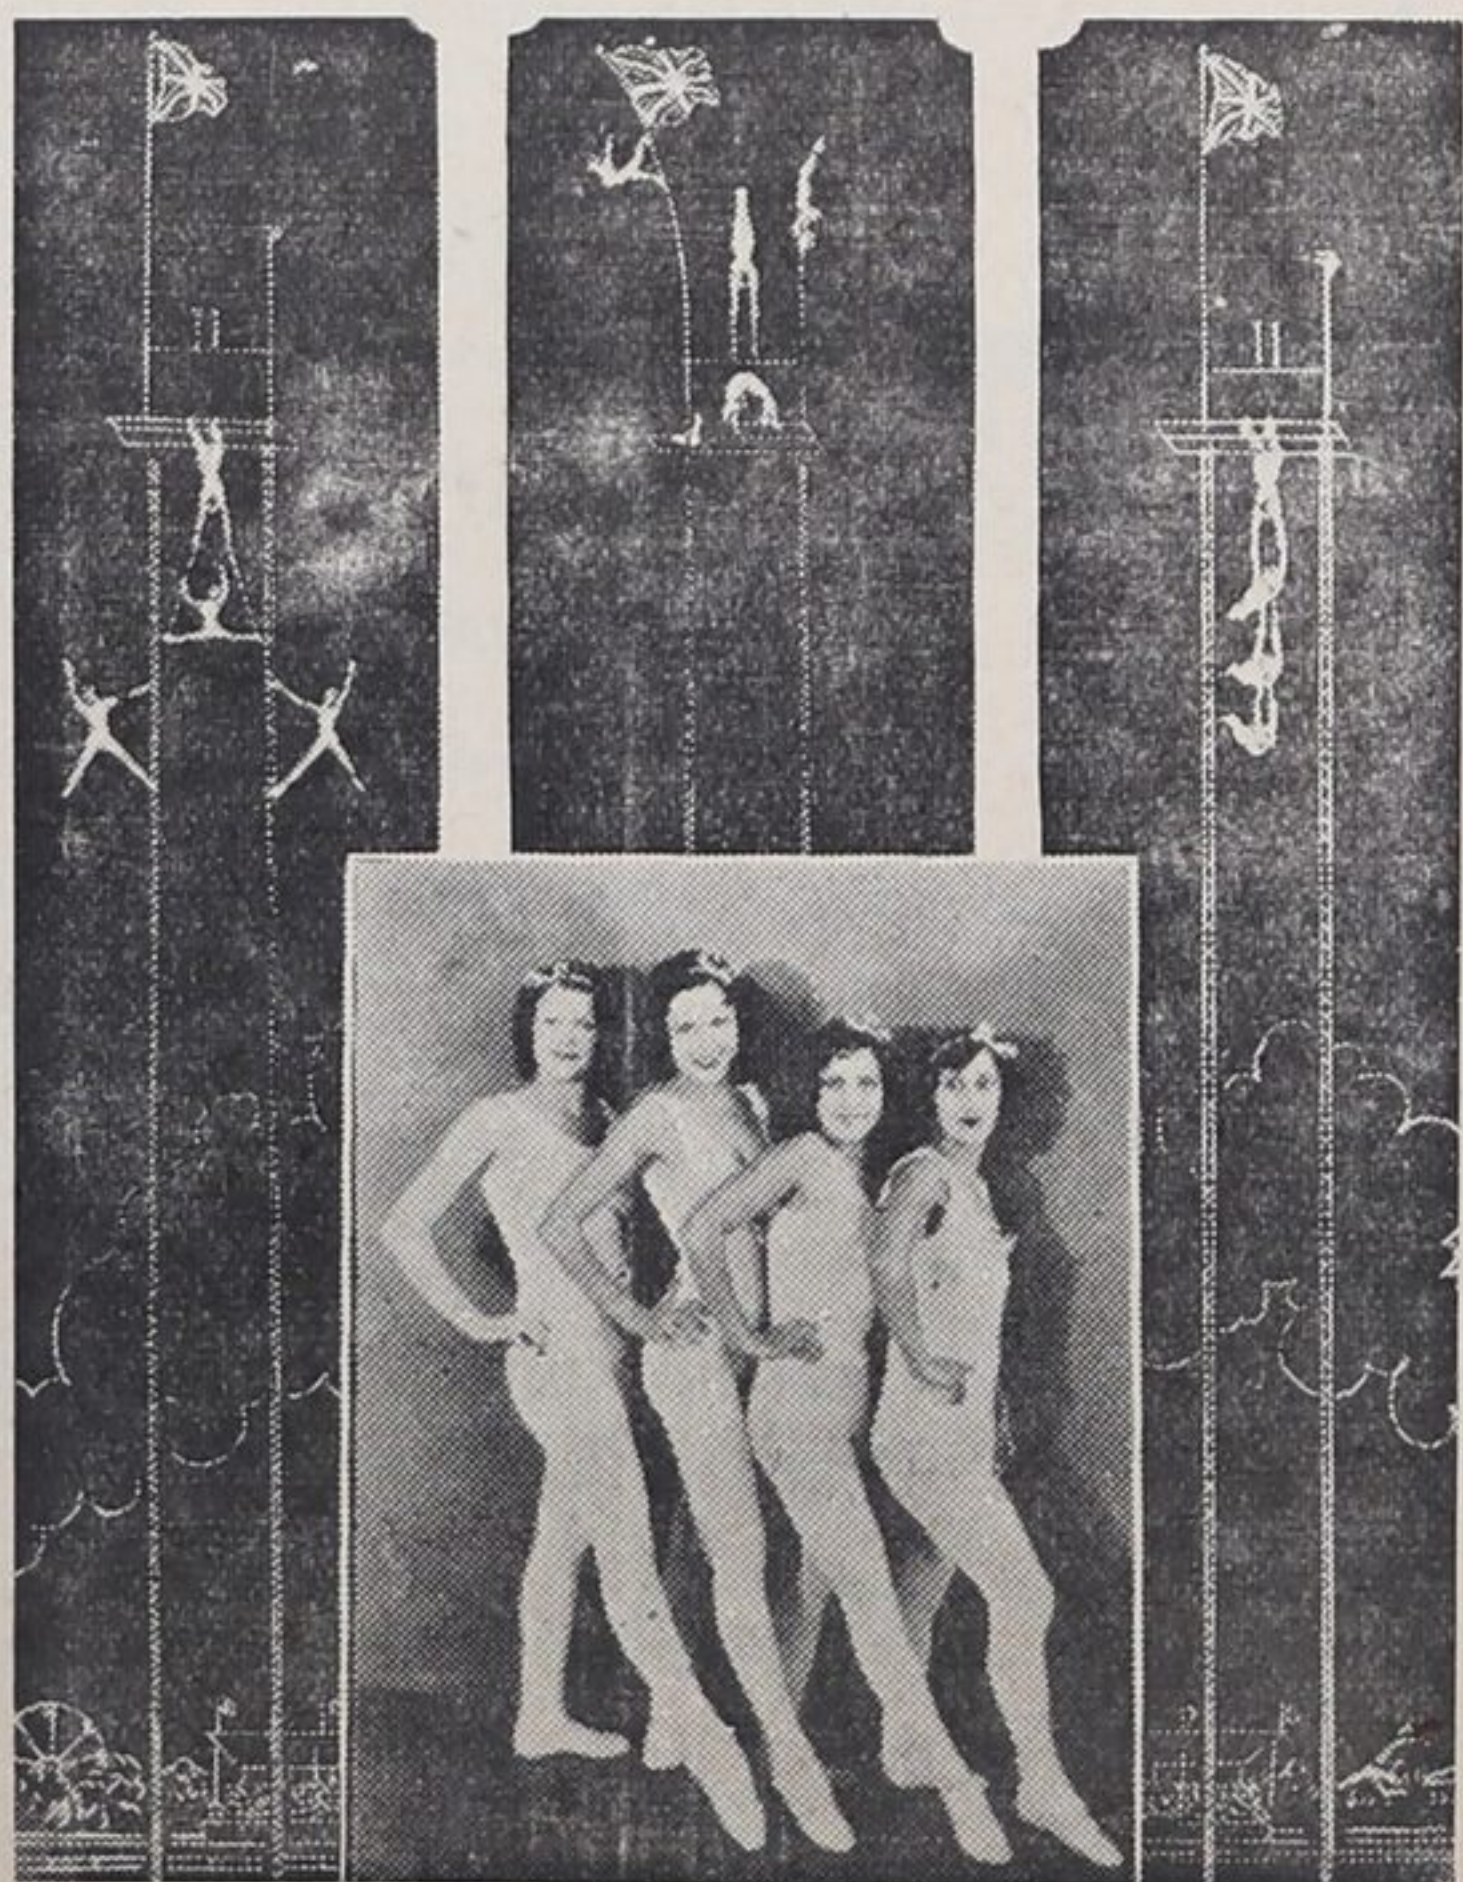

Let's suppose that the dollars you spend were suddenly given minds of their own—and the job of deciding what to buy for you

They'd have to learn their way around in a hurry. And one of the first things they'd do would be to study the newspapers—every advertisement that discusses something you'd be needing, or wanting. They'd get the latest facts on automatic refrigerators and sports shoes and tea and motor oil and all the rest. They'd make a business of knowing what, where and when to buy.

Are you less careful and less constant in your ad-reading than you should be? Do you have to depend on other people for facts that are clearly stated in the advertising pages of this newspaper? Read advertising thoughtfully, consider all the points you find there on their merits. Find out in advance exactly what things will best serve your needs—and why. After all, that's the only way to get your money's worth, every time.

The real reason for Advertising is not to help some one sell something, but to help you buy what you want!

So dangerous is their routine that Miss Sue Alric, original member of the troupe, fell to her death at Kitchener three weeks ago. Tomorrow will be Kiddies' Day on the Conklin Midway.
