COULD THE COUNTRY STAND IT?

We read with interest this week a proposal by an ex-service man that Canada's defence forces might be increased by some fifty thousand to one hundred thousand men as a partial solution of the unemployment problem, and are inclined to wonder whether the country could stand it, rather to question the advisability of such a course. Would the expense be so much greater than that of providing relief for the workless, or would the proposal be too much in the nature of a revival of military activities which have been allowed to remain in the background? Fortunately there has appeared to be little or no need for any increase in our national defences, up to a short time ago at least, but more recently this question has been brought into the limelight.

It does appear that the plan might very well be considered. The proposal was that young men from 18 to 22 should be enlisted; that in addition to whatever military training they were given a system for other training in some useful occupation would be worked out in conjunction, and the scheme would probably not result in any great stirring up of a military spirit. Its sponsor, who presented it to the Veterans Assistance Commission, believed that its adoption would permit many older men now in the ranks of the unemployed to get positions that would make them self-supporting. This seems logical too, and would be a saving to governments who find the relief burden a heavy one.

It seems to us that, even with some experience of army life, we would prefer to see the young men of the country enlisted in some such scheme than to be suffering from a lack of employment. We believe, also, that if a call went for volunteers to join such an army there would be a satisfactory response, sufficient at least to give the plan a fair trial.

EARLY AUTUMN BEAUTY

The beauty of the Northern woods and countryside generally at this season of the year is something that appears to be ever new. Year after year, one can enjoy it to the full; it is free to all, and it is something that when once seen will be eagerly looked forward to as the years go by. While the summer appears to be the season for outdoor enjoyment by the majority, and it is then that the attractions of the countryside are most dwelt upon as a lure for tourists, there is no time of the year that can beat a good September, or even early October.

For the past week or two there has been an ever-interesting change taking place in the country. It is something of an experience to watch the gradual maturing of the foliage in the woods, the coming into full bloom of the later garden flowers and the ripening of the fields of grain along the highways. A trip by motor, train or even on foot just at this time can bring enjoyment to anyone with a sense of the beautiful, and one may be pardoned for saying that our own particular district holds attractions at this season that are second to none.

TRIP ON QUEEN MARY SUBJECT OF TALK AT ROTARY CLUB MEETING

A trip on the maiden voyage of the Queen Mary was the subject of an interesting talk by R. S. Taylor of New Liskeard at the weekly meeting of the Haileybury Rotary Club on Monday. Mr. Taylor was in Europe when the gigantic liner was being prepared for her first voyage across the Atlantic and, by what he termed a stroke of good luck, was able to secure passage just prior to her departure. To the Rotarians he described in a very interesting way something of the proportions and equipment of the great ship, the send-off given her on her maiden voyage and the great reception that greeted her arrival in New York, but, he said, he couldn't say that he had really seen the Queen Mary. She is of such vast proportions that only by getting a long distance view, impossible at either the scene of her departure or arrival could one properly see the big ship. However, he had learned a lot about her on the voyage and gave a picture of life aboard that was intensely interesting.

In introducing the speaker, R. H. Unwin, president of the club extended to Mr. Taylor the organization's thanks for his kindness in giving his cabin cruiser for use during the water sports day at the end of July last, and at the close of the address the appreciation of the club members was extended to the guest speaker by C. F. Tuer, K.C.

Well Known Canadian Poet Gives Recitals in Schools

Wilson MacDonald, distinguished Canadian poet, has spent the past week in the district, during which he has given recitals in various schools. Visiting the public and separate schools during the afternoons and the high schools in the evening, Mr. Mac-Donald has greatly pleased his audiences.

Monday night he was at the Cobalt High School, Tuesday at New Liskeard High School, and last night he completed his final engagement in the three towns at the Haileybury High School.

Mr. MacDonald recites several of his own compositions and gives a lecture as well. He had visited the high school here on a previous occasion and there were many who heard him then that again enjoyed his recital last night.

Romance in the Subway

They glanced at one another
In a crowded subway train,
Over the swaying heads he smiled
Her eyes met his again.
His shirt and tie were faultless,
Her teeth had a brilliant gleam,
For he was an ad. for collars
And she for a dental cream.

Haileybury firemen won the softball game at Ville Marie in the recent sports day events, but failed to get into the money in the big events, the wagon and ladder races, both being won by the New Liskeard brigade.

The report of an important discovery of silver and copper in Hebecourt Township, Que., has been the cause of a small rush into the district this week. Considerable staking has already been done, and some Haileybury men are in the district.
