Mayor Lauds Services of Temiskaming Health Unit

Asked for his opinion this week on the Temiskaming Health Unit Services, Mayor A. H. Cooke said that "it was the best forward step taken by the Town in years".

The Health Unit, which has been active here for the past year operates at a cost of $140 a person per year. Half of this sum is returned to the Town in the form of a grant each year so that the actual cost is 70c per person. An overall sum of $1,400.00 per year is spent on the service and investigation reveals that any other comparable scheme would likely cost in the neighborhood of $3,200.00.

The service covers every phase of community life. No avenue to good health is overlooked.

A Sanitary Inspector is constantly checking restaurants, hotels and dairies—every conceivable source of contamination is investigated so that citizens are assured of full protection. Water purity is tested regularly. These are routine checks but at any time, town fathers and citizens are free to contact the Health Unit for advice or assistance in ironing out their daily problems.

If a contagious disease crops up or in the event of an epidemic, the Unit stands ready to go into immediate action. They have the full support of the Department of Health at Toronto.

A veterinary service is also extended to the entire area.

The Medical Health Officer, Dr. Harris, makes regular visits to Haileybury to check on health problems and consult with the staff.

Perhaps the most important aspect of the Unit affecting the day-to-day life of every individual is the service of the Public Health Nurse, Miss Muriel Rice. A Graduate of Kingston General Hospital, Miss Rice returned to her native town in 1950 and as Mayor Cooke said, "We feel extremely fortunate to have obtained her services".

The plan of nursing service carried out in this district is the same as that in effect throughout the province and is part of the whole community health, medi-

Labor Dispute Ends in Deadlock Over Check-Off

Negotiations between the National Organization of Civic, Utility and Electrical Workers representing the seven municipal employees in Cobalt and the town council, have dragged to a halt after discussions lasting three months.

If a satisfactory solution is not reached soon, H. M. Reid, local organizer for the United Steel Workers Union, who has been representing the municipal workers during the negotiations said that the union will probably apply for conciliation services by the Ontario Labour Relations Board.

The point over which the union and council cannot agree is a voluntary revocable check-off. A system whereby the employees union dues averaging $1.75 each per month are deducted from their pay by the town. Agreement has been reached on a majority of clauses in the proposed agreement, including holidays with pay, statutory holidays, sick leave and increased rates of pay. Pay rates agreed to are $1.15 an hour for the truck driver, $1.10 for the waterworks man, $200 monthly for the pumphouse man, $1.05 for the two utility men and $1.00 an hour for the two laborers.

Mr. Reid blamed town clerk Cyril Vzieta for the council's refusal to agree to the check off. "The clerk said he wouldn't agree to it and the council strung along he said. "It seems a strange situation where the town clerk gives orders to council".

Mayor Ken Buffam angrily denied that the council was making orders from his clerk. Mr. Vezina pointed out that it would mean a lot of work for him and the rest of us agree" he said.

"I can see no reason why for the first year, the union's representative should not collect the dues. We have gone along with the union on most things, and agree to pay increases ranging from 10 to 15 cents per hour. The members of council have given up a great deal of their time to these discussions and I can see no reason why the union should get sore now." Mr. Buffam added that if the union wants to take the matter to a conciliation board, he has no objections. "By the time they have finished discussing things with various boards, this council will be out and they can start all over again with the new council if that's the way they want it", he said.

North School Principals to Meet at Sudbury

Sudbury principals will be host to more than on hundred principals from all parts of Northern Ontario on Friday and Saturday, October 24th and 25th. Business sessions and discussion groups will fill Friday and Saturday. On Friday evening, the Sudbury Public School Board will play host to the group at a banquet in the Church of the Epiphany hall.

The Northern Ontario Public School Principals' Association was formed in the fall of 1947. The principals of the North have pioneered in this field and have received high praise from the Department of Education. It is an encouraging note to see that their ideas are catching on in Southern Ontario, where several groups are in the process of organizing.

The Association's aims are (1) to further the cause of Education in Northern Ontario; (2) to study collectively advanced methods of public school administration and supervision; (3) to share educational principles and experience with others.

Haileybury will be represented by Principal of the Public School, Lorne Wiseman.

Local Nurses Attend Rally at Cochrane

Mrs. S. Robson, Miss Muriel Rice, Miss N. Dwyer and Miss J. Blacquire (instructor of Practical Nurses at the Hospital) attended the rally of the Registered Nurses' Association District 12 which was held in Cochrane last week-end.

Seventy-seven nurses from all over the district which extends from Cochrane to Hearst enjoyed the get-together. One of the number travelled from Moosonee for the event.

Miss Gladys Sharpe, president of the R.N.A.O., addressed the gathering at a banquet in the Legion Hall on Saturday night.

This is the first meeting to be held since the sub-division of the area which formerly was known as District No. 9 and took in the Sault Ste Marie area.

Bride of Last Week Honored at Shower

Mrs. Olive Childs and Miss Ida Childs were hostesses at a surprise shower last Tuesday for Mrs. Jack Dewson, whose marriage took place on Saturday. The table was centred with a beautiful cake and crystal candlesticks, pink and white streamers and white bells completed the setting. After games a baby carriage was wheeled in by Miss Ida Childs and Miss Kathy Simpson. The guest of honor opened the gifts and thanked each one in turn for their thoughtfulness. Miss Kathy Simpson and Mrs. P. Gilroy assisted the hostesses in serving lunch.

Those attending were Mrs. P. Libby, Miss Ann Keddie, Miss Kay Keddie, Mrs. Kay Trowhill, Miss Theresa Deraiche, Mrs. R. Brown, Mrs. M. Hurteau, Mrs. N. Austin, Mrs. M. Glazier, Mrs. A. Cooke, Mrs. B. ## Parents Hear Algonquin C.O. On Cadets in Peace or War

Addressing the Home and by higher authorities and attention is given to developing special evening, Lt.-Col. G. L. Cassidy put forward a clear and resounding call to parents to recognize the basic principles of Cadet Corps organization in Canada.

"Militarism", said the Commanding Officer of the Algonquins, "is alien to our thinking and our heritage. Our national instinct is to shy away from it. In comparison, if we were to live in another part of the world, it would be part of our nature."

Taking first the broader picture, Mr. Cassidy said it was not generally known that the Cadet organization is an integral part of the military organization of Canada. They form a definite function in the over-all organization of the Army.

The peacetime active force is relatively small, numbering some 50,000. The Reserve, however, is larger in number and includes the first line and the more shadowy supplementary reserve officers and ranks who are in and out of civilian occupation.

The Cadets bear a close auxiliary connection with the Army being assisted if and when necessary prior to coming into full-scale service. They do not, as some are wont to believe "just drift." Administration is handled by a Cadet Service made up of five or six officers and 30 or 40 N.C.O.'s of the active force personnel who travel around throughout the year to see that instruction follows a pattern and actively assist in training. In the case of the Haileybury Corps, the bulk of the work is handled by Corps officers and instructors within the Corps itself.

Mr. Cassidy pointed out that there are two types of Cadet instructors. In Haileybury, they are drawn from persons already in the Reserve. Then again, there are the civilian instructors who take a month's course at active force Army camps.

With regard to the Corps itself, there are two types. Firstly, the closed Corps restricted to High School personnel. In peacetime, this is a voluntary organization. Mr. Cassidy pointed out "that although in wartime, a mandatory basis was commendable he did not believe that pressure should be applied". Secondly, there is the open Corps which is not restricted to any educational school, but calls on elementary High Schools or working lads from 14 to 18 years of age.

"The Algonquin Corps is a novelty" said Mr. Cassidy. "There are only three of its kind in Ontario." Immediately following the war, a natural apathy settled over the country and attempts to perpetuate cadet life on the old basis had lost their appeal. Fortunately, there was a nucleus of boys in the three towns who did not wish to give up the idea so it was with them in mind that the Algonquins sponsored a Corps.

In spite of setbacks, among them the loss of recruits to the Air Cadet Corps in New Liskeard, the Corps has blossomed under the able guidance of Major L. H. Charbonneau and Capt. R. Poppleton. Patterned after a regular military organization, the Corps is administered by a military instructor, they advance through the ranks and equipment is furnished by the army. Although they are not paid for training through the year, at summer camp they receive a stipend for completing the course.

The program for the Corps at the local headquarters is laid down and by higher authorities and attention is given to developing special evening, Lt.-Col. G. L. Cassidy put forward a clear and resounding call to parents to recognize the basic principles of Cadet Corps organization in Canada.

Mr. Cassidy spoke highly of Cadet life at summer camp at Ippewash. Driver's courses, signal work and a Junior Leader's course give the Cadet qualifications which are considered should he join the Reserve. A Cadet is automatically a Corporal with a Junior Leader's certificate. Living conditions at the camp are excellent; it is proof against influences with no drinking and a slim allotment on leave.

In summing up his views on the value of the Corps to Canadian life, Mr. Cassidy said, "I believe that it does pay off in the long run. While everyone does not come back with the force, they are available in an emergency. The Reserve Force counts on them for their continued strength and to keep the military picture alive. "They are trained", he said, "at that age where youth soaks up knowledge and best absorbs military training. They are the best source of officer material which is always in short supply."

Although the government intended to rely on University C.O.T.C.'s for officer material, Mr. Cassidy said that he felt "you could take them all and dump them in the ocean. He explained that a man must stay abreast of the continuous changes in the military world and that a six or seven year lay-off was too much. The Cadet is the best source because he has four years of training behind him, most of them are sharp and race through the rest of the training.

"To my mind", Mr. Cassidy said, "the non-military assessment is by far the most important aspect of cadet life." Speaking as a teacher who recognized the importance of discipline, he said he had seen a boy whom one recognized immediately as "ticketed for trouble" go to a seven-week cadet camp and come out with something worthwhile drilled into his mind. He submitted to discipline fully and respected authority. Discipline comes from a voluntary decision to obey. The idea of self sacrifice channels an energy which is going to burst out somewhere. Beyond this, they get an idea of service and patriotism.
