'STILL SMALL VOICE OF GRATITUDE'

We're going to have to move this nomination meeting night for Mayor, Council and School Board up to the new gymnasium next year. Not that the Town Hall isn't a nice bright room to spend the evening in but it's too small. It won't hold all those conscientious citizens who are right in their pitching. Don't know when we've spent such a stimulating evening, sure in the knowledge that all that seething mass of humanity had wakened up and realized that on the face of it, municipal elections may look like small potatoes but as goes the municipal, so goes the federal, so goes the world.

We almost got sort of choked up to see all those grateful citizens that the public servants hear from every day all year, pushing their way to the front to give the boys a pat on the back.

The other day, Arthur Meighen warned the people of the democracies who are weary of the struggle for survival. The doctrines of Communism have imbued the Russian people with "undoubted willingness to toil and endure." It's like carrying coals to Newcastle to repeat that here because after Thursday's demonstration, it is apparent that no one in Haileybury intends to end up in the salt mines. They'll still be sitting on the shores of Lake Temiskaming when the last atom has been dropped.

CANDOR

In a flamboyant age it is both a heartwarming and hopeful sign when shining honesty is made public. We have reference to what is probably the most forthright remark made by a Hollywood citizen this year. In a short interview, reported by the Associated Press, Ginger Rogers was asked why she had not made any more musicals with Fred Astaire. Her simple reply: "No one has asked me." N.Y. Times

THE LETTER BOX

The Editor,

The Haileyburian

Dear Sir:—

Following is an explanation of what is being done at the pump-house and filtration building:

As most people know, we have installed new pumps. These run automatic.

It was my idea to have the heating the same, because the boiler in the pump-house is very old and may break down at any time. No matter what people say this heating system is not satisfactory. Why, when they have a large boiler in the place do they have to have a coal stove going full blast as well?

The reason is that the heating system is set up very poorly and you cannot put a large fire in the boiler. It builds up too much pressure due to poor circulation and it blows the water out of the boiler. This is very dangerous. This applies to the filtration plant as well.

The chlorination of the water is done by putting chlorine in the water in gas form. If the room in which the machine is located is not kept at a certain temperature, the chlorine goes into water in liquid form instead of gas, which is not good.

Therefore is it not better to get rid of the heating system that Noah had in the ark and bring our pump house up to date?

Where Mr. Lecky got the figure of 20% to 50% more for oil, I would like to know. I will say that some burners may run 20% more in large homes; but it must be remembered that when people use automatic heating they do not let their homes get as cool at night as with the hand-firing.

If oil burners are installed properly there is nothing better. But they should not be a cheap burner. The proper furnace or boiler means a lot on the amount of oil used.

We intend using one boiler to heat both buildings, instead of two boilers and a stove with a lot of stovepipes hanging all over the place.

The pump-house is one place that should be fireproof above all else.

Wooden stairs were put in last year without consulting the rest of the council, until after they were installed. I feel sure permission would not have been granted.

As far as I can see, they were installed to save shovelling about twenty shovels of snow in the winter.

These stairs I had to remove in order to make room for the new boiler, with the least amount of stove pipe.

There are no rads with this system. It is heated by unit heaters. It is also a hot water system, not a hot air system.

There were no bids asked for this work, because I feel no one else would do the job as cheaply as I am doing it.

I hope this letter explains everything as I am sick of the childish way things have been going on.

Yours very truly, A. C. DEMPSTER

Dear Mr. Mayor:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank you and your Council and the Haileybury Board of Education for the services you have rendered to the town during the past year.

The positions mentioned involve a good deal of time and energy without remuneration and I feel sure many others join me in wishing you all another successful term.
