THE RED SHIELD

"Do something about it" was the cry of William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army when he saw shivering, starving men sleeping on the Thames Embankment.

Salvationists ever since have sought to obey that charge whenever and wherever confronted with human suffering and frustration. The Army is a practical organization. It believes that it should first serve the person in need and then concern itself with bringing that person into a right relationship with God.

Today, as never before, the Salvation Army in Canada is faced with the need for greatly expanded services.

Heed his cry. "Do something about it."

"Theirs is the Present Who Can Praise the Past"

It is great to be a Canadian. Do you know how great it is?

Harry Henderson in a book of essays by Canadian authors called "Our Sense of Identity," contains the observations of one of Canada's outstanding authors, Bruce Hutchinson. With penetrating insight, he answers the questions of an American journalist sent over the border to find out for his paper "What the Canadian character, the Canadian personality, the Canadian dream."

"How did we do it? No political decision, no economic plan will explain that. It was the unshakable will to make a nation—a home—a life of our own for which no inconvenience was too great and from which no tempt-tation could swerve us, things beyond our ability to express or explain."

This is a nation of ten provinces and within each province are innumerable cities and towns. In the northern part of Ontario lies your town. It is our task just now to search into its past history and its development. We are finding that its progress from a veritable jungle to a land bounded on all sides by the rich history of mining and lumbering development to the greatest sweep of farm lands to the west, cultivated by solid industrious emigrants from across the ocean to the town itself, which bears rightful claim as the most beautiful residential area north of Toronto is a story in which every man who claims this as his home must take pride.

It is an engaging characteristic for it is to be preferred to the loud boast and yet it is time to tell the story as it should be told—of courage and fortitude and vision—and it needs no romancing for the truth is enough.

Sixty is a short span. You must visualize a hill with one log cabin in 1897 and go out on Lake Temiskaming today and look back over a thriving little town on the side of this hill to appreciate the development. For every one citizen who has grasped the significance of this Canadian story and is ready to assist in the work of putting it down for the records, there are five who are hesitating in the true Canadian fashion. We sense at once that they are proud of their efforts and well they might be; and that they are proud of their town. So with a Diamond Jubilee before us, we re-emphasize as we have done so often in the past few months—that success depends en-

SPRING CLEAN-UP CAUSE OF CALL TO LOCAL FIRE BRIGADE

Firemen had no trouble last Friday extinguishing a fire on the property of Harry Jenkins where a pile of burning rubbish spread to some waste lumber. The brigade made use of the 'Booster pump.'

We have so much to protect

This Canada of ours — is ours to enjoy at a price — the price of constant alertness. We cannot take for granted our freedom to worship, to vote, to educate our children, or to order our home life as we please. All these freedoms are ours only as long as we are willing to do everything necessary to maintain and defend them.
