EDITORIALS

Haileybury council recently enacted a bylaw, providing for the payment of the mayor and council for their services. The rate of pay is little enough, and just about the same rate that prevails in Bucke township.

However, it does not seem likely that Haileybury will ever equal Bucke in the interest taken by the average citizen in his local government.

Tuesday night more than 250 ratepayers turned out for the nomination meeting in Bucke township. Every candidate was expected to say something. Each member of the present council had to make a report, and answer a good many pointed, and sometimes heated questions.

It is a pity that as much interest in the local government is not taken in Haileybury. Of course, Bucke is famous for some peculiar issues. This year the ratepayers waxed wrathful over a piano, who bought it and why. A year or so ago a certain outdoor, one-hole structure, caused great concern, and last year there was a great tizzy over the amount of gravel deposited in someone's yard by the township's trucks.

But while some of the issues raised may be picayune, or downright funny, it is a sign of a healthy democracy. It will be a sorry day when Bucke's nomination meetings reach the deadly dullness of many others in the district. And it is impossible to imagine the sturdy, and individualistic electors of Bucke ever needing two nomination meetings to find a slate of candidates.

Every year someone gets lost in this district while deer hunting. It always costs a lot of effort and expense to find them, as well as causing their friends and relatives a great deal of worry.

One way of preventing most of this, might be making it compulsory to carry a compass in the bush. The production of a compass might be made a condition of buying a hunting permit.

THE ROTARY WHEEL
By Norman Abraham

Did you wonder what happened to this column last week? Well, this is the season for hunting, and as the Haileyburian Staff goes fishin' in the summertime, I went huntin', so did Leo Gough and Dr. Crawford. We had to give a report on our hunting trips at the meeting.

Dr. Crawford didn't get his annual deer this year; Leo Gough and his party got a big buck; the party I was with, got five deer which was good hunting, as Bill Fleming, who was also in our party, said, its the first time in his hunting experience that the deer were coming so close to him he had to back up to shoot. But everyone had a good time.

At our meeting on Nov. 7th, we had two visiting Rotarians, Robert Murray and Reg. Mino-gue, both of North Bay.

A report on our bingo Nov. 26 was given by Wilf Bailey who stated that more cards will be available at this bingo, and the specials will be played on separate sheets with markers, which will be different from our last bingo. So we hope to have a good turnout.

At our recent meeting on Nov. 14th, we had three guests, Mr. Seymour who is the P.T. instructor at the Haileybury High School, Mr. Bowman and Mr. Stevens both of the Ontario Hydro Commission in New Liskeard.

A film was shown which demonstrated a number of exercises on a trampoline, which is a new piece of training equipment being introduced in many schools.

Also a film was shown called the Magic Link which demonstrated inadequate wiring in homes, as Mr. Bowman explained previous to the film showing.

Next week, our meeting will be on Tuesday afternoon instead of Monday. When we will be honoured in having as our guest, the district governor of Rotary district No. 247, Ross L. Dobbins of Peterborough. So we are looking forward to having an interesting meeting.

Across the Kitchen Table

By Mrs. Mac.

Do you ever get just plain sick and tired of doing things in the same old way, of having the furniture in the same place that it has been in for years, the same colors in your rooms and drapes, in fact, do you get sick and tired of the sameness of everything?

Well, most of us can not afford to go right out and buy new wall paper, paint or drapes when the notion strikes us, but we can and should change the "even tenor of our ways" at times.

For instance, those breakfast dishes that stare us in the face with a baleful glare three hundred and sixty-five days of the year; some of these nice sunny mornings, pile them in the dishpan, cover them with a clean tea towel, and hie yourself out to the garden for just half an hour, tidy the dead blossoms of some of your flowers while you admire the satiny sheen and the gorgeous colors of the remaining blooms, toss out some of those nasty weeds that persist in popping their heads up where they are not wanted, and make some plans in your mind as to what changes you can make in your garden next year, what new variety of plant or bulb you can try, and I am sure that when you go back to your kitchen, those dishes will not be nearly so formidable as they were when you finished your last cup of coffee.

Another way of relieving the monotony is by changing the position of the furniture in your rooms. I moved my chesterfield just last week and I am eying my desk with a speculative eye at the present time.

However, while I enjoying changing furniture around, my husband looks upon my changes with disapproval, although when they are done, he will usually admit that they are all right.

Perhaps an incident that happened shortly after we were married intensified his idea that furniture should "stay put."

We lived on a farm, of course, with no electricity to produce light at the touch of a button, and one day I got the urge to move the bed from one side of the room to the other. That night when my husband went up to bed, knowing his way perfectly around the room in the dark, he walked across and sat down on the little bed that wasn't there!!! For the next few minutes I at least knew where he was.

One of my favorite methods of relaxing or just enjoying myself, is to settle down with a good book or magazine, in fact, when I was quite a bit younger than I am now, my mother used to say that she didn't know what my nose was like because it was always stuck in a book.

Reading is not only a relaxation, it is an education as well, and so are cross word puzzles. A jig saw puzzle just drives me frantic but almost every cross word I do teaches me several new words.

I seem to be harping on morale boosters this week, but here are some smart ideas to try out sometime when life doesn't seem so rosy; using one of your prettiest cups and saucers, take time out for a cup of tea or coffee in the middle of the morning or afternoon, and it will be all the better if you can call in a favorite neighbor to have one with you.

Write that letter you've been intending to for the past month, it really doesn't take long, once you get started and it gives you such a virtuous feeling when it's done; when you change into a fresh house dress, use some of that nice perfume that you've been hoarding since last Christmas, if you don't use it, the kids will probably spill it anyway; try doing your nails with a nice clear rose nail polish, if you haven't been in the habit of using it, you'll get used to it, and it's good for your nails, too, helps keep them from getting brittle.

Last week I spoke of the sayings of small children, and this week I have some more to tell of. A little girl, eight years old, who loves to come and help me dry dishes, informed me very solemnly this morning that she likes old people better than kids, "and," she said, "I think they like me better than kids do, but I don't know why."

Another small auburn haired lad who is now a very clever Toronto doctor, looked at some of his mother's callers, who had said they "simply must go," and then remained chatting away, and after a minute or two, he waved his hand and said, "door, go, good-bye."

The same lad, when he didn't want to kiss any of his numerous friends and relatives who were always pestering him to do so, would say, with his adorable lisp, "I haven't any kitheth left, you'll have to wait till God sends me thome."
