"Life Insurance"

There is no hospital in Northern Ontario or Northwestern Quebec which has progressed as far or as fast in the enlargement of its facilities than has our own Misericordia in Haileybury.

During the past ten years it has seemed as if every month there was some improvement some new piece of equipment some extension of the building.

It doesn't seem so long ago that the passageways in the crowded women's floor used to be filled with cots and cribs, each containing some small sufferer. Then a couple of years ago the beautiful new pediatric wing was opened.

Burgeons used to take turns in the operating, for the operating rooms were limited. Now there are ample facilities and some of the most modern equipment to be found in North America.

It is the same story in nearly every department. The nursery is much bigger than it used to be although some new equipment cannot be used except in emergency because of lack of space.

The new recovery rooms have reduced post-operative dangers for patients, and made it more pleasant for the other patients in the wards. The x-ray equipment is comparable with any in the province, although here too the technicians are hampered by lack of space.

Strategically located Misericordia receives many accident victims, and while they are treated promptly, the lack of emergency operating rooms cause a good deal of disruption.

But despite its fantastic growth, Misericordia today must expand still more. The provision of chronic wards, and the improvement and enlargement of existing facilities is now urgent. The Hospital administration has courageously launched a campaign for funds with the intention of making these very necessary improvements.

The people of this area can consider themselves fortunate that the administration at Misericordia has been imaginative and forward looking. For each step forward that Misericordia takes is nothing but a form of increased life insurance for each and every one of us.

Just about everyone has heard of Juliette and quite a few know that one of her hobbies is cooking, but few people know who all the cooking is for; her husband, Tony Capazzi. Here she makes one of her specialties—Curried Lobster a la Capetown.

THE BIBLE TODAY

All over the world there is an astonishing revival of interest in the sacred text of Holy Scripture. Never in our history have Christians been committed to such a tremendous volume of translation and revision work. This year 1957 finds the Bible Society supervising Scripture translations into 243 different languages.

Since world war II the work of translation has increased at least sixfold. This is to be accounted for by a perfectly normal stage in the development of the life of the Church. Where mission work began about 50-60 years ago, now is the time that we might expect whole Bibles to be coming to completion.

The law of kingdom growth "First the blade, then the ear and then the full corn" applies here—first the tentative pioneer Gospel, then, by various stages of trial and error, the New Testament, now, as the Church and community have taken root and grown, the whole Bible without which no Church has the articles of faith.

At a time of profound moral confusion and fear, of the failure of systems, of the revival of ancient faiths such as Islam, Hinduism and Buddhism, and now the astonishing success of new ones such as communism, what more natural than that man should once again turn to the Bible and begin to take it seriously.

HOT PIPES

Firemen answered a call to the home of Leo Fillion on Blackwall Street at 7.45 this morning to find over-heated stove pipes creating alarm, but no damage resulted.

Men who feel above their jobs will always have others above them.

Most every man has his price, and some of them are cut prices.

The only pointers some people can give are fingers of scorn.

STAMP OUT FIRE IN COBALT!

Mayor, JOHN DAMIANI

Across the Kitchen Table

By Mrs. Mac.

Several days last week were so cold and nasty that you could almost see that old grizzly bear of a north wind slapping at the leaves on the trees and growling at the ones that refused to fall down before him. The days are growing shorter and the nip of frost is in the air.

Yet despite all this, I still think autumn is one of the nicest times of the year. The coloring of the leaves is almost indescribably lovely and even when they have fallen, is any sound more satisfying than the "swish-crunch" of dry leaves as you walk through them?

The autumn flowers have a jewel like sheen in their coloring, the ruby red, deep purple and golden orange of the cushion mums and asters, and the late marigolds. The pansies seem to take on new life and dozens of their worshipping little faces are turned toward the sky.

And even when the days do become dark and dreary, I am not worrying, because in a parcel in my kitchen, waiting until I have a few spare minutes, is a great big chunk of spring, contained in red and yellow and pink and white tulips bulbs yellow and purple crocus and brilliant red ranunculus.

With their hidden beauty stored in the dull, drab bulbs, which will soon be buried deep in the earth to absorb strength to bust their fetters, their blooms will emerge in colorful array and even Solomon in all his glory had not beauty such as theirs.

The difference in the service given by clerks in stores is really marked at times. Some are so pleasant, ready to serve you with a smile (but not hounding you,) other seem to look through you or over you while they show you what you ask for and some continue a conversation with other clerks while waiting on you, hand you your change and forget to say "thank you."

The other morning I went into a store on my way to the office to make a small purchase. No clerks were behind the counters although I could see the back of one in the door of a back room and hear an interesting (?) tale of how "I didn't get mad, I just told her, but I wasn't mad, etc., etc."

After waiting a few minutes, I came out and went to another store where I got the article I wanted and also efficient, pleasant service.

These are, I'll admit, only little things, but repeated as often as I have seen them repeated in the past year or so, they are definitely not an invitation to customers to continue patronizing these shops.

Convention time for Women's Institute members in Northern Ontario is over for another year and I do hope that the branches that sent only one and in some cases, no delegates will realize that sending delegates to both conventions and district annuals is a very necessary part of Institute work and education, and will begin to make plans early in the year in order that the necessary money may be on hand to pay their expenses. A bit of "good neighbor policy" could perhaps be utilized, if one member would help out at the home of another, or mind an extra child so that another member could attend. Anyway, lets see every branch represented and well represented, at next years district annual and convention.
