At one time tuberculosis was the great scourge of the young. Women in their twenties were its chief victims. The picture has now changed. Deaths caused by tuberculosis are much more numerous among men than women and the greatest number of deaths among women from TB is in the 40 - 49 age group. Tuberculosis is not inherited. It "runs in families" because it is an infectious disease. Where one member of a family has contracted it others in the family are exposed to infection frequently and over long periods.
