SNEAK THIEVES

Prefer Men to Women 6 to 1

Mother's purse, not father's wallet, may be the place to carry the wherewithal for the family trip, according to a man who knows, John Stewart, former FBI agent, now chief inspector for American Express.

Stewart voiced his opinion as pickpockets and purse-snatchers prepare for the holiday shopping season. A rich harvest is expected because more money than ever before will be in circulation.

The light-fingered brigade lifts between $40 and $60 million each year from Americans, Stewart said, with the man in the family supplying them with the lion's share of the loot.

Stewart has statistics to prove that women are far more careful than men when it comes to money. Of the 50,000 persons who report losses of travelers cheques to American Express each year, less than one-sixth are women.

Why are men heavier losers than women?

Major reason is because women are more cautious in dealing with strangers. They are more reserved. Less apt to flash a big roll in a restaurant or crowded bar.

To keep sneak thieves from getting too rich, Stewart offers these hints:

For women: Never put your purse down in a store, church, or theatre. Thieves are experts at whisking it out from under your nose and disappearing. Avoid using a shoulder bag on vacation or shopping trips where you'll be walking through crowds; if you do carry a shoulder bag, keep one hand on it constantly.

For men: Try to avoid carrying a wallet in your hip pocket or any side pocket. Keep a flat one in your breast pocket. Don't load it with papers - keep it thin. In a crowd, be sure your suit coat is buttoned. When you use your wallet, never put it down. Replace it immediately in your pocket.

And remember - sneak thieves usually work in pairs, and keep a sharp eye out for bulging pockets and dangling pocketbooks. The common practice is for one to bump or otherwise distract the intended victim while the second reaches into the man's pocket or woman's handbag.

This time her demonstration was on soups and desserts, and she also gave a number of menus and meal plans. Recipe books were also given out. Lunch was served.

The January meeting of the St. Andrew's Women's Federation was held in the Sunday school room of the church.

The devotional period was conducted by Miss Muriel Rice, president, assisted by Mrs. Hopkins.

ing the tea table, Mrs. Reavell be held in the United church the produce table.
