

Across the Kitchen Table

By Mrs. Mac.

I found the cutest little poem in a paper last week. It was in the Scottish "dialect" and told in detail how to curl. I read it to the curler in our office and when I had finished, what do you suppose he said? With a puzzled look, he remarked "But what does it MEAN?" Aw, the feckless Sassenach, it gars me greet to think that anyone could ken sae little!

were promised me two weeks ago!! Please, pretty please?  Our congratulations go to Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Lowery who celebrated twenty-one years of married life on Wednesday January 22.

WORDS or last being known THOUGHTS

BUT LET'S FACE IT...

After listening to those high school students who spoke on the panel discussion at the Home and School meeting the other night. I am more than ever convinced that if the world is going to the dogs, as so many people pessimistically say, it is NOT because of the younger generation. As long as there are students with the sane, sane co-operative and down-to-earth ideas that were expressed in that discussion, we may truly feel that the majority of the young people of today can keep their feet on the ground even though their heads may sometimes seem to be in the clouds. And their teacher, who led them in their discussion, may also take a bow for the manner in which he guided them without "bossing," encouraged them without pampering them and introduced a humorous note without too much familiarity. These discussions are something that to my way of thinking, should take place more often.

 And speaking of high school, I am still waiting for reports from the Students Council which
