Steady Progress At Agnico's Cobalt Mines

Since the new mill came into operation on July 15, tonnage milled and production has been increasing steadily, according to mine manager, Jim Armstrong.

In this five and one half month period up to December 31st, 591,198 ounces of silver and 124,617 pounds of cobalt were produced for an average monthly production of 107,490 ounces of silver and 22,600 pounds of cobalt.

Recently the mill has shown ability to easily handle 300 tons of Temiskaming sands or low grade feed together with 300 tons of straight mine ore feed on a daily basis.

Progress toward the new "Keewatin" silver ore at the Agnico mine is well along. The winze preparation has been completed and sinking is now underway. It is anticipated that this new ore will be reached sometime in late February or early March.

The company is now operating four mining units: the Beaver-Temiskaming, the Lode Christopher, the Foster and the Agnico. The Right-of-Way will also be added to these producing mines in the near future.

The virtual elimination of payment for cobalt content of silver ores by Deloro smelters has occasioned considerable readjustment of the mill and its produced concentrates in order to cushion this blow. Until a satisfactory market for cobalt can be obtained, the company will be relying completely on the silver content of its ores. The company employs a total of about 140 men.

Mr. Armstrong said, that the company's financial position has improved considerably. Agnico is the new company formed from the reorganization of Cobalt Consolidated.

Dr. Morral Speaks To Cobalt Branch C.I.M.

Dr. F. Rolf Morral, divisional consultant of the Battelle Memorial Institute, became one of the five men in the world, outside of the Cobalt mining fraternity, to be presented with the traditional silver fifty-cent piece good luck charm, given to him when, as guest speaker he addressed members of the Cobalt branch of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy, at the Legion Hall, Haileybury, Friday night, January 24.

During his talk, Dr. Morral, told his audience that while cobalt production was higher today than its demand, "the fear that there is not enough cobalt in the ground has been the main deterrent factor" in assuring it a larger demand on world markets.

Dr. Morral said he felt that while the demand for cobalt would remain stable in the United States, other world countries would use increasing amounts of the mineral for industrial and other production.

Cobalt is not a household word as aluminum, but it does a lot for us, he said.

Among the many uses of cobalt he cited ceramic painting, enamels, hardeners for steel, the cobalt bomb, alloys, corrosion resistances, inks electroplating jet engines, the treatment of anemia, vitamin B-12, and blue grass—known from before the time of Christ. Some 28 different industries utilize cobalt.

"Excessive production goes into a stockpile," he stated. "Recently I was talking to defence heads in Washington and they say it is no use using cobalt since there wouldn't be enough of it available."

Illustrating his talk with slides, Dr. Morral also showed a 20 minute movie in color on the production of cobalt at Katanga in the Belgian Congo—a mine responsible for 65 per cent of world production. Cobalt today is produced in Canada, the U.S.A., Russia, Finland, four parts of the African continent, Burma, Australia and recently discoveries were made in Cuba. He said Cuban mines would be shipping concentrates to New Orleans.

He said there was reason to believe the mineral existed in outer space. Meteorites show a one per cent cobalt content.

Earlier Dr. Morral was taken on a tour of Cobalt by G. P. Thoday, an official of the Cobalt Consolidated Mining Corporation Ltd. The visitor saw geologist Fred Thompson's astounding mineral collection, the Provincial Institute of Mining, Cobalt's streets, the Cobalt Consolidated, and picked up much old lore of the silver mining town from Art Moss, proprietor of the Cobalt Foundry, and Jim Armstrong, manager of Consolidated.

At the CIMM meeting he was introduced by Jack White who played the Cobalt Song on the piano and was thanked by Mr. Moss. Mr. Moss made the presentation of the silver half-dollar fully engraved.

COALT SCHOOL

Cobalt may rent its old public school and the arena to the contractors installing the Trans-Canada gas line. An emergency meeting was held last night of the council school board and the community center board. Representatives of the three groups will meet today with the contractors to negotiate terms.

The meeting was called after Councillor Jack Mathews met with a representative of the contracting firm. Mr. Mathews said that the contractors may be interested in using the old school as a dormitory and the arena for storage.

He also suggested that the council should immediately register all unemployed men in the town, so that full information could be given to the contractors. He said that the pipe line company may give work to men experienced in rock blasting.

The meeting agreed that everything possible will be one to welcome the gas line workers "Let's put a sign up—Working Men Welcome," school board chairman Arnold Todd suggested.

Mayor Damiani said that the chamber of commerce could take on the job of registering unemployed in the town and immediate area. Mr. Damiani will represent the town at today's meeting, along with Mr. Todd and Pat Slaght of the community center board.

Advisory Committee of C.N.I.B. Hold Meeting

A meeting of the South Temiskaming Advisory Committee for the Canadian Institute for the Blind was held in the Hotel Haileybury on Thursday January 23, which was attended by Leslie Jones field secretary for the CNIB, and Mrs. Martin, a home teacher, both of Sudbury.

Others attending the meeting included Mrs. J. H. Sumbler, New Liskeard; Mrs. R. D. Cumming, Mrs. W. C. Arnold, Miss T. Fortier, Miss Muriel Rice and J. Frey, all of Haileybury.

The report of Mrs. I. M. Thompson, home teacher, was read and amplified by remarks from Mrs. Martin and a vote of thanks extended for it.

Mr. Jones submitted his report and made several comments regarding different items.

He expressed appreciation for the success of the fund raising campaign, to the Lions Club of New Liskeard and Cobalt and to the towns people of other district towns. He also expressed the hope that grants from municipalities would become more widespread, thus showing that the work they are doing is recognized. He hoped, too, for more active representation from Cobalt.

Services to the local blind and prevention cases were authorized.

The next meeting will be the annual one, on February 20, at which a new slate of officers will be presented. The place of meeting will be announced later.

The flag of Denmark is the oldest one in use today.
