Editorial

Cobalt will be a poorer place without Paddy Hassett. He was one of the old timers who through the years contributed a great deal to the community. Paddy never made a big splash, but he worked hard for many good causes. The arena was one of his pet projects, and he was a loyal member of the Kiwanis.

We remember Paddy best, sitting over his morning coffee in the Minerva, rolling a cigarette, and talking with everyone who came in. He was a great Conservative of the old school, who stuck with the party through the darkest days, and looked with slightly dubious eyes at some of the present day policies now the party is in power.

Paddy Hassett was one of the rapidly thinning ranks of old-timers. His memorial will be that no one ever said an unkind word about him, while he left behind a host of friends of all ages and denominations.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY

A Giachino, well-known operator of The International Travelling Agency in Cobalt, who has sold tickets for travel by steamship and air, as well as tours to many parts of the world, would now like to retire.

This will be a splendid opportunity for a younger person to take over this Agency which is known throughout the world.

References are required and Mr. Giachino is quite willing to show his sales record.

A younger person can also secure other agencies, such as insurance, etc, which works very well in other towns.

A real bargain for a responsible person would be Mr. Giachino's part of the building, comprising six rooms, storage room, equipment and garage, on easy payment terms. No reasonable offer from a responsible person will be refused.

This property is centrally located, on Silver Street, a good location in an old town is better than a bad location in a new town.

The ground floor now being used as an office could be converted into another store or an apartment.

Also for sale is a unique Sound Truck, equipped with power take-off, 1000 watt electric generator, for showing sound and color advertising and other out-door motion pictures. It is also equipped with an air mattress and cooking facilities for camping. Original cost, $3,200 good condition, never been driven in winter. Will sell with the above property for about one third of original cost.

Notice to all clients holding advance reservations: Please rest assured that your booking will be taken care of and until property is sold, I shall continue to serve you.

Call or write, A. Giachino, Phone 4456, P.O. Box 597
Cobalt, Ontario.

To all owners and harbourers of dogs in the township of Buck, who have not obtained their 1958 license by August 30th, will be charged under by-law 322 of the Corporation of Township of Buck.

'ole orrible's column

Cobalt may soon be advertising for a chief of police. It will all depend on what happens at the next regular council meeting. We hear that at least three councillors are in favor of replacing the OPP with a municipal force. Three others are more inclined to keep the provincials. This will drop the whole thing in Mayor John Damiani's lap.

The Silver town isn't likely to get a better force, but it might save some money with its own force. The present three men are costing some $4,000 a year each, plus the cost of a car.

It seems ironical that Cobalt was first Northern town to adopt provincial policing of the municipality, and may be the first to quit. Cobalt has had a lot of good cops in its day. Jim Tappenden policed the town for seven years, and is now OPP sergeant at Haileybury. Tiny Spencer was with Jim for some five years, and is now corporal at Virginiatown. Gerry Guinter is at Kirkland Lake, and Bill Morrison is in the Bracebridge area.

There is one thing every provincial will admit, most of them don't like town police work. If Cobalt forms its own force, we hope the town council will set up a proper police commission. Nothing is worse than having the police at the beck and call of every councillor. In most towns, the commission is made up of the mayor, and the local magistrate and judge. They hire and fire the police.

There still seems to be some beer in the local pubs. But some bars have run out of some brands.

Talking about police, the Canadian Press pulled a beautiful boob with its report of some 18 small boats stolen by criminal ring. Actually one boat has been stolen. Some newspapers are always beefing about lack of police co-operation, but if they didn't put words into the mouths of the police, they might get further.

One town employee in Haileybury is reported to be mighty mad. It seems that he got a raise in pay, but when a majority of the council found out about it, they cut the pay cheque back again.

One indignant reader cancelled her subscription last week. Seems she doesn't like beer. Three others came in to renew their subscriptions and two people came in and took out new ones.

We think we have now licked the problem of printing pictures in the paper so that they don't look like lumps of mud. In fact, we are rather proud of some of the reproductions we have been getting. Therefore we will be pleased to print all the pictures of local interest that our readers can give us. Please make sure that the prints are about the same size that they will appear in the paper.
