The Rambling Reporter

Monday was groundhog day. It is supposed to mark the time that the little animal comes out to see if spring is just around the corner or whether we are still due for more winter. If he fails to see his shadow—spring is almost here. We don't suppose the little fellow could burrow his way through the snow, without freezing his feet, and then we doubt if he would see the shadow. Anyway, we think that W. F. Lickley and Mrs. Lickley had a better idea than the groundhog—they have gone looking for spring. Leaving behind the cribbage board and bridge table at New Liskeard Curling Rink, and presumably humming "California Here I Come," they set off the early part of the week for Vancouver by plane, and then by car for a couple of months—or enough time anyway to give the snow time to start disappearing.

We must be doing better with both the Speaker and The Haileyburian. The other morning over a cup of coffee, Bill Fleming and Jack McDonald of Haileybury, thought it was about time that we took another ribbing about short comings of either paper and immediately started the gears whirling in their domes, to see what they could come up with. They thought and thought, and thought, and finally the gears ground to a halt and the coffee got cold and they came to the conclusion that there was nothing that they could complain about. All of which makes it look — if we can keep up the pace that 1959 will be a little more cheerful year—if not a better one, Jack McDonald counts that day lost if he can't find anything to rib us about for one reason or another.

A new curling trophy will shortly make its appearance in Temiskaming. Following Saturday afternoon's game at Elk Lake, when a rink of New Liskeard curlers journeyed to the little 50-year-old community for a friendly game, Jim Waterhouse and Len Mallinson decided to put up a trophy for competition between the two clubs. To be known as the Waterhouse-Mallinson Trophy it is likely that the cup will be played for more than once each season. While Elk Lake curlers have been able to show New Liskeard curlers some of the finer points of the game on New Liskeard ice, over the years, the trophy is being put up, probably in appreciation for some of the technique the boys from New Liskeard demonstrated on Saturday.

Make it a habit to keep your feet on the ground and you'll never have far to fall.
