A Tourist Outfitter's DIARY

June 8

The black flies are really bad to-day. Even Mose was swatting at them. One of the young hunters asked Mose how come, he thought black flies didn't bother Indians. Mose always has an answer. "Oh," he said offhand, "since biting you Americans, Indians really taste good to them."

The weather has been very warm and co-operative lately, except for the strong winds. It blew so hard the other day, our old hen laid the same egg four times! After supper, the winds died down to a mere gale, so we took the little Piper cub up and pointed it towards an island thirty miles away where some of the fishermen are camping out. As our lake became smaller and smaller beneath us, the bush country opened up ahead and around us: this Temiskaming District, this rich wonderful wilderness of forests and lakes. Through the variegated greens of pine, poplar and birch, the thin brown rope of the road coiled away into the distance. Soon we spotted the lake and the campsite we were looking for and landed beside the island. The boys were still out after the big speckles, so we left them the fresh salad and the pie that we had brought as an excuse for dropping in on them. Or maybe we don't need an excuse to take the plane up for a spin on a hot evening. As we headed for home again, a bluepurple heat haze turned the sun into a blurred ball of fire.

Now that the spring bear hunting is over for another season, we can catch our breath before the family vacations start. Hunting sure brings out peculiarities in human nature. One party of seven fellows arrived with twenty-eight cases of beer and one loaf of bread - for one week. Don't know what they were going to do with all that bread. However, they didn't get really drunk while they were here, they just had a continual rosy glow about them. They took turns shooting at a bear that was coming in to our garbage dump, but couldn't hit it. Finally the bear came right in without paying any attention to them. Then there were the two hunters from Delaware who saw a bear the first afternoon they went out. They battalion of the Canadian Expeditionary forces and went overseas in 1916 with the Canadian Railroad Troops at Ypres, France, where he earned the rank of Sergeant.

He returned to Canada in 1919 and went to work for Northern Canada Supply Company until going into service for the Federal Government as a weather recorder, where he worked for 22 years.

Mr. Reavell opened a grocery store in Haileybury on the corner of Blackwell and Georgina Streets in 1921 and has been there since. In the course of his Legion Membership he has held every office. He was awarded his twenty-five years service pin some time ago.

Mr. Reavell's wife Elsie, died in 1952. Mr. Reavell has two sons and a daughter, Keith, Sierra Leone; Fraser, Haileybury, and Mrs. N. G. MacPherson of Cobalt.

STRICTLY INFORMAL

Once he finishes his banking he'll be off for a little fishing.

Like millions of other Canadians, he finds the local bank a handy, friendly and familiar place where he can drop in as casually as into the corner store. He knows there is nothing formal about banking.

Bank premises are designed, and bank personnel are trained, to provide speedy, efficient and convenient service in an easy and informal way.

Wherever you go, you will find bank staffs providing the kind of personal service that is keyed to the easy, modern way you like to do your banking.
