Drive Safely

This coming week-end is the last long one of the summer, and if past records are any criterion, more people will be hurt, or killed, in traffic accidents, than at any other time of the year.

The safest place in the district, we suppose, would be New Liskeard Beach, and there will be plenty to watch there, with ball games on Saturday, Sunday and Monday. But if you must drive, drive safely.

We would also like to remind you that District children will be flocking back to school after the Labor Day Holiday, many of them for the first time.

When you drive through the streets, watch out, the child you harm could be your own.

Buy The Tad A Drink

Nearly everyone has watched a kid with a glass of milk, I guess. And you have to have swift eyes to watch a kid with a glass of milk because it goes so fast it seems to be inhaled.

A kid and a glass of cold milk just seem to go together. In fact, they get about as close as it's possible to be, what with the milk ending up in the kid's innards.

To us, it just doesn't seem possible that there are youngsters in this whirling, blue-eyed world who have never tasted milk. But there are.

There are youngsters with names like Abdul or Dimitros or Tina or Pietro or Yaza, hundreds and hundreds of thousands of them, who have never even seen a glass of milk. They live in Italy, Greece, Turkey and Egypt.

I'm telling you this, because you, personally, can set 'em up for a lot of those kids. You can serve them milk as surely as though you went to the refrigerator, filled the glasses and set them down before the tads.

I'll tell you how you can do it. It's easy.

Around Nov. 5, a ship will be leaving the waterfront down here in Toronto. It will be carrying at least 2,300 tons of powdered milk, or enough to make 110,000,000 glasses of liquid milk.

The powdered milk isn't going to cost a cent. In fact, you really gave the milk in the first place, for there are 60,000,000 pounds of surplus milk powder in Canada. The Government has offered to make that milk available to recognized relief agencies.

What you can do, though, is help pay the cost of shipping the powdered milk to the countries where it's needed. Once there, it will be distributed by CARE of Canada.

It won't cost much to start the ship on its way. For the price of a package of cigarettes, just 36 cents, you can send enough powder to make 691 glasses of milk.

For just one dollar, you provide 1,920 glasses of milk. For ten cents, the price of a phone call, you can pay the freight on enough powder to make 192 glasses of milk.

For five dollars, you could throw a really big party. You could provide the equivalent of one glass of milk for 9,600 kids. In a lot of ways, that's the most you're ever going to squeeze out of a five-dollar bill.

So that's your ship that will be sailing from the Toronto waterfront on Nov. 5. You have to stoke it. It will be called The Tely Readers' Milk Ship. That makes it yours.

If you're interested, send a contribution, then, to: The Tely Milk Ship, The Telegram, Bay and Melinda Sts., Toronto 1.

Send what you can. To some, it will be much, much more than you think.

Doing It Better

When he spoke at the opening of the American National Exhibition in Moscow, Premier Khrushchev made a comment that, though he did not intend it to, refutes his frequent assertion that communism must inevitably replace capitalism.

"I do not want to conceal," said the Russian Premier, "that while examining these exhibits I had a feeling not only of satisfaction, but to a certain extent of envy. But this is a good envy, envy in the sense that we would like to have all this soon. We are sure that in the not too distant future a considerably greater number of different goods of high quality will be produced in our country."

Mr. K. has a right to be envious. After forty years of trying, his country is not producing the goods. Of course no socialist could admit it and keep his standing within the lodge, but it is capitalism's system of competition and of freedom to profit through service to the consumer which produces the goods.

Here is another comment on this same point. It was advanced in a recent editorial in the Sentinel-Review of Woodstock, Ontario, and it argues that whatever good communism believes it can do, capitalism is already doing it better:

"There are many respects in which the West is far truer to some of Karl Marx's doctrine than the most ardent supporters of communism anywhere. Marx said something to this effect: 'From each according to his ability. To each according to his need.' For our opinion, no nation has ever achieved that ideal. But it is much closer to reality among Western nations than among the communist nations. Indeed, if this principle were applied to the letter, we suspect that Khrushchev and his friends would be looking elsewhere for a job."

On the same theme here is another pertinent comment, by H. G. Hilton, head of The Steel Company of Canada: "I believe that the free enterprise system has proved itself to be the only system that enables man to preserve his individual liberties while at the same time providing him with the maximum opportunity to improve his living conditions. The standards of living enjoyed by the vast majority of people in North America are the clearest evidence of this. It would be a disaster for the world if our way of life were to be destroyed."

Premier Khrushchev admitted envy of the displays at the American exhibition in Moscow. Reliable press reports say that the public evidenced disbelief that the displayed goods were freely available to ordinary American workers. Nurtured on the theory of the super-efficiency of state planning, it seems impossible for these people to realize that, permitted the incentive, the individual can always do it better.

BILSTON, England — Things got a little balled up at the ladies' soccer game here.

A visiting aggregation billed as "the Italian ladies touring team Benefica" raised a few eyebrows in the stands as its members yelled, "To me, Kath" and "Have a go, Dot" in the not-so Italian accents of Lancashire.

Fans demanded an explanation.

The local promotor said he saw the beam name "Benefica" on its letterhead asking for a match. After he wrongly assumed the squad was Italian, the game was billed that way.

The visitors actually were from Lancashire and their name isn't even Italian — it's Portuguese.

The girls got friendly with Portugal's "Benefica" men's team while touring there and adopted its name.

MONTREAL — The name of Maurice (Rocket) Richard, hockey's greatest scorer, is to be given to an arena being built by the City of Montreal, Mayor Sarto Fournier announced.

During a sod-turning ceremony, Mayor Fournier said the $3,000,000 arena will have a seating capacity of 5,000 and will probably be one of the most modern in Canada. It will be part of the sport centre planned for the city's east-end.

"In paying honor to Maurice Richard," said the mayor, "we are inviting youth to take inspiration from his conscience, his physical aptitude and intelligence. We are giving this name to the arena not only for Maurice himself but because he is a symbol of probity and honesty."

I See by THE PAPERS

SAN FRANCISCO — Neckties made out of Kim Novak's lavender bed sheets are not selling so well. This complaint, aimed at no one in particular, was registered by San Francisco manufacturer Beall Ernest, who obtained the frilly sheets at an auction.

He said he appears to be stuck with about the 200 ties he fashioned from the sheets, used in the film Vertigo.

He has cut the price to $3.50 each from $10.

BOOTLE, England — British railways officials made this week-end appeal to the children of Bootle: Stop putting your heads on the track in front of approaching trains.

"Locomotive drivers are getting so nervous over this practice that many refuse to operate trains going anywhere near Bootle," said an official.

Drivers have reported that the youngsters line up along the track, put their heads on the rails and issue challenges to see who will stay there longest. It's the old game to find out who's chicken.

"Naturally, we have to stop," said the motorman Albert Price. "But the kids just run farther up the track and get their heads down again.

"And that's not all. Sometimes they heap junk, like old baby carriages and motor tires, on the
