Skirts

How short? How long? This seems to be the big question for fall. The DIOR collection just grazed the knee cap. Vogue says, "This length is delicious for the 'young slim legged'". Then "Lanolin" had many skirts reaching three inches below the knee. Our Canadian Couturiers (a group in Montreal) who have been designing very smart clothes for Canadian women like their skirts 3 to 4 inches below the knee. We think this is a becoming length for most people, other than the very young Miss.

Now showing the perfect afternoon dress in Blin and Blin wool, the dress of inimitable good looks — an essential to every wardrobe with smart slender lines. It has a rich silky smooth surface in brown, green, blue and black, size 12 to 18.

We have more youthful styles for the half size figure than ever before. Three piece costumes and plain dresses from 12½ to 26½.

Worn with a beautiful mink trimmed coat by Gordon or a brown Forstmann, (superb cashmere fabric) with large brown lamb collar you will feel and look most luxurious. We like a plain black nubby weave fully lined with black BORGANA. This is smart and oh, so warm and light.

For the special occasion we have a wide selection of birdcage veils, small feather hats and velvet bows intermixed with pheasant feathers. Also dressy and casual hats.

The shop is brimming over with new fall merchandise with something to suit every taste.

As Others See Us

by C. J. Harris

In the course of reporting the Royal tour an interesting and objective, though in no way unfriendly, appraisal of Canada was cabled back to his paper by Patrick O'Donovan of the London Observer. In Canada, wrote O'Donovan in part, "There is the desire for political and cultural independence—a preference for a Canadian identity. There is also an increasing acceptance that close economic union, even dominance by the United States, is inevitable and that close co-operation between the two is the only way to survive."

"This," the able journalist went on, "accords with the facts. Canadian initiative is limited. (The country has a population of 17.5 million, which is the same as the American population increase under President Eisenhower.) Its defence is integrated with the United States. It probably could not disagree, now, on any significant issue that affected the defence of the continent . . ."

"On the economic side, Canadian business leaders now seem to accept the inevitability of American domination. This acceptance is eased by their fear that they may be excluded from any really successful economic integration in Europe. Nor can the capital they need come from anywhere else, and its continual spread arouses irritations which are louder than they are deep."

One factor that could counteract this growing influence would be rapid population growth. The desirability of immigration, particularly from the United Kingdom, can hardly be over-emphasized. And on that point, Canada will attract the ambitious and the energetic if we halt the trend towards the welfare state. We need to reduce taxation and permit the individual to save more of his earnings for investment to his own and the country's benefit.

National survival may literally depend on a clearly stated, aggressive immigration policy.

their trip to Ireland. They report a wonderful time and travelled over many parts of the country on sight seeing tours. Had many funny experiences. One incident in particular was where they kissed the blarney stone.

The crippling disease has appeared in southern Ontario and Quebec with greater frequency than in recent years.
