Modern Sewage System Planned for Earlton

The village of Earlton has applied to the Ontario Municipal Board for permission to install a sewage system, and council members have high hopes that the request will be approved.

Councillor Belanger said that the $50,000 plan already has the approval of the Water Sources Commission, and work will be undertaken this fall if final permission is received soon. He also said that piped water system is not practical in view of the low assessment of the 100 households in the town.

The project will be financed by the Water Resources Commission, payment for which will extend over 30 years.

The proposed system will consist of two main sewers in the village. Each householder will pay an additional $30 taxes for the next 30 years for this local improvement.

The line will provide service for about 80 per cent of the homes and business establishments in the village. The disposal point will be in a marsh half a mile west of the airport road.

The installation of sewers has started a modest building boom in the airport centre, and six houses are in various stages of construction.
