

Joseph E. Bayliss

Joseph E. Bayliss, 84, died on Monday evening, November 2, in the War Memorial Hospital, Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan.

During his lifetime, Mr. Bayliss was a Klondike sourdough, ship captain, interrogator of the "Titanic" ship disaster, and FBI agent and author.

Since the death of his wife, Mrs. Estelle Bayliss, November 29, 1957, he had made his home in Sault Ste. Marie. Prior to then, Mr. and Mrs. Bayliss resided in the summers on St. Joseph's Island near Richard's Landing, Ontario.

Mr. Bayliss is survived by one son, Clifton M. Bayliss of Grosse Pointe, Detroit, one brother, George L. Bayliss of Sault Ste. Marie, and two sisters, Mrs. Violet B. Vail of Sault Ste. Marie and Mrs. J. T. Leishman of Haileybury.

The Editor,
Dear Sir,

May I, through your paper, offer some criticism of Remembrance Day Service held in Haileybury? I am sure many people leave the Cenotaph with a feeling that the dignity and true meaning is almost pushed aside. This is the time when we pay very special tribute to our war dead, by joining together in a reverent service of remembrance. When the Last Post and Reveille is sounded, many comrades pass in review to the veterans who were spared, and many loved ones pass again before those who knew, loved and lost them. Why not let us leave the Cenotaph with that sound in our ears, and our memories softly with us? Why break the past by the indignity of business firms' names being read out as the youth of our town, dressed in various uniforms place wreaths? Could this not be done in silent dignity?

I do not mean to take from the idea of the merchants placing the wreaths. They too want to pay their tribute. I would suggest that their names could appear in the Haileyburian following the service.

As a last thought may I appeal to the parents of young boys to train them to remove their hats and to stand at attention for not only the National Anthem and O' Canada, but also for the Last Post and Reveille? Although they may be too young to know the true meaning of the service, there is no time like the present to teach them.

Yours sincerely,
Vickie Cassidy (Mrs.)

Silver Miller

this can be accomplished at a minimum cost.

"Good results in this program would also provide quick access to other potential and unexplored ground, belonging to Silver Miller. This particular ground is the Silver Hill property on the south shore of Giroux Lake, and three other claims to the south and west of Silver Hill.

"Should the exploration of Conisil and the surrounding ground, for which ample funds are available be successful, Silver Miller could be developing ore from the Giroux Lake for many years to come."

Coming Events

An open meeting of the local association of the Haileybury Girl Guides will be held in St. Paul's Parish Hall, Thursday, November 26 at 8:30 p.m. Anyone and everyone interested in Girl Guide movement welcome. 37
