Do You Know . . .

- * That it may take 12 times more distance to stop your car on snow or ice than on dry pavement.
 - * That you may lose up to 60% of your car's pulling power if you spin your wheels.
 - * That at 20 m.p.h. and 0 degrees temperature you may stop your car in 140 feet; but at 30 degrees temperature it will probably take 240 feet.
 - * That the polishing action of tires spinning and sliding at intersections makes the road surface more slippery.
 - * That the old practice of lowering the tire pressure to get more traction on slippery roads is no longer effective with the modern low-pressure tires.
