I See by THE PAPERS

PARADISE, Mich. — It was colder than Hell in this Upper Peninsula community.

Paradise had an estimated low of 20 degrees below zero.

Residents of Hell, a south-eastern Lower Peninsula community near Detroit, on the other hand, basked in a comparatively moderate five degrees above zero.

GLASGOW — Scotland has a problem that many persons would find a pleasure in solving — it's making more whisky than people are drinking.

Stocks have mounted to 300,000,000 gallons — 60 gallons for every man, woman and child in Scotland.

"I don't see how the world will be able to consume all the whisky now maturing unless the rate of consumption goes up fast," said a spokesman for one leading distiller.

MONTREAL — Dresses made of paper and to be thrown away after wearing them once could be available in the not too distant future, the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association was told recently.

W. T. Bennett of Montreal, chairman of the association's technical section and chief engineer of Canadian International Paper, said newly developed resins now are being used to produce experimental garments.

Surgeon's gowns and tennis clothes already have been produced of paper in the United States, he said.

For the dresses, paper is twisted into thread and woven into fabrics.

Carpets made entirely from a tree already are being marketed, he said.

Twisted paper makes the back of the carpet. The pile is made from rayon — a pulp product.

HUDDERSFIELD, England — Citizens of this town complained to their member of Parliament, Donald Wade, that they had to use ear stoppers against the noise of a woollen mill and yet were unable to sleep at night.

Wade, who does not live in the district, spent a night at the home of one of his constituents.

"If I slept for an hour between 11 p.m. and 7:30 a.m., that would be on the top side," he said, declaring he's going to do something about the situation.

LONDON — British huntsmen appealed to the government to give their hounds a better chance in the war against the fox and the hare.

The wily fox and the nimble hare have discovered the unguarded electrified railway. The hounds have been taking a beating.

Eight days ago, a fox led 37 hounds on to an electrified line in Kent. Nineteen died. The fox escaped.

A hare accounted for eight more hounds in the same way Saturday. With the bodies of beagles strewn over the line, it bounded safely away into an adjoining field.

Jean McKeever, master of the Blean Beagles of Kent, said:

"I am lodging an immediate appeal about the danger with the minister of transport. Those hounds were worth more than £400 ($1,120)."

BUFFALO, N.Y. — A reflective highway paint that gives drivers a sharp view of the road at night has been developed at Cornell Aeronautical Laboratory. The paint is applied so that it reflects only the light from the driver's own headlights, the laboratory said. A special applicator sprays the paint on only one side of the tiny mounds and bumps on road surfaces so that headlight glare from oncoming cars is not reflected toward the driver.

LONDON, Ont. — Mrs. F. Gordon Stronach, wife of London's new mayor and a confessed hat-hater, has bowed to a plea from the Millinery Workers' Union, Montreal.

After receiving a letter from S. D. Cohen, the union's public relations director, she went out and bought two hats.

Shortly after her husband was elected, Mrs. Stronach told reporters: "I'm against hats. I hate hats."

Mr. Cohen read these comments in a Montreal newspaper, and wrote to the mayor that "... those of us who have the welfare of the hundreds of Canadian millinery workers at heart were disturbed to say the least ... it created an example that could prove harmful to the workers."

He asked that henceforth, whenever Mrs. Stronach appears in public, "she may be seen wearing the most beautiful, attractive and becoming hats of a type and kind for which Canadian ladies' hat designers are so well known."

Mrs. Stronach replied that she likes hats on other people, but she can't find one that suits her.

She wore one of her new purchases for the first time at a Knights of Columbus reception.

"Did those men ever laugh!" she said. "Look," they kept saying, "she's wearing a hat."

Life Saved By Wearing Hard Hat

Wearing a hard hat is credited with saving the life of John Claude Arseneault. The employee of the W. Milne and Son Lumber Company was presented with the Beaver Club award recently.

Last fall Mr. Arseneault was struck on the head by a decayed poplar 'chicot' which was estimated to have weighed about 250 pounds. Although stunned, he escaped serious injury, thanks to the hard hat.

Robert Lighthart, company safety supervisor, acted as chairman for the evening and the ensuing events. Logging superintendent W. Christie congratulated [redacted] and man Jack Maill [redacted] for their efforts in producing an enviable camp safety experience through their desire to follow the company's policy of wearing protection.

Barney Roy, the new area representative for the Lumberman's Safety Association, pointed out that employees who only wear head protection when the boss is about are, in the light of John Claude Arseneault's experience, fooling themselves. He cautioned the group to be always on guard for the ever-present dangers of starting power saws dangling from one's hand, on one's knee or on loose brush piles.

Roy Potts, Safety Promotional Supervisor for the Lumberman's Safety Association, presented the award to Mr. Arseneault. Prior to the presentation, Mr. Potts stated that, of more than 2,100 disabling injuries sustained by operators in Class 1, 479 were charged to the Southeast Ontario district of which Temagami is a part. He further indicated that the area accident details had been studied and revealed that 172 could have been prevented or the injury minimized by the wearing of hand and foot protection.
