Women Help In Cancer Research

Six of the scientist who this year will share in the $1,322,892 being distributed by the National Cancer Institute of Canada for cancer research and study fellowships are women. This is more than have ever before entered this field — although ever since Madame Curie directed her mind to a practical use for radium, with world-shaking results, a woman research worker has not been unique.

Two of the recipients, Dr. Katrina P. Nagy and Dr. Esther V. W. Yamada, are located at the University of Manitoba in Winnipeg, and the other four are scattered throughout the country. Miss A. Hope McArdle is on the staff of the McGill - Montreal General Hospital Research Institute, (the only non-doctor in the group, she will obtain her Ph.D. degree next month), Dr. Valentine Donisch is a biochemist at the University of Western Ontario in London, Dr. Parvathi K. Basrur is at the Ontario Veterinary College in Guelph and Dr. Nelly Auersperg is at the University of British Columbia.

Dr. Yamada and Miss McArdle are the only two Canadian-born in the group. Dr. Yamada is a native of London, Ont. She won her bachelor of science degree at the Unificates and tie pins were pre-master's at McGill and, in 1951, her Ph.D in biochemistry back again at Western. She has had two, two - year research fellowships abroad — in Sweden and in Bethesda, Maryland. Her present interest is in virus cancer in chickens, and to study it she has been granted $6,614.

Miss McArdle is a native Montrealer and a product of McGill University. She and Dr. Nagy are the only two of the group still single. One of her associates, in recommending her for the $4,250-fellowship granted, remarked on her "determination to fight a problem until she has mastered it." She has studied or taught at the Vanderbilt University School of Medicine in Nashville, Tenn., the University of Glasgow, Scotland, and the Fibiger Laboratory in Copenhagen, Denmark.

Dr. Nagy was born in Hungary and won her three degrees at the University of Manitoba where she is now lecturer in anatomy. She is particularly interested in developing a fast method of diagnosing cancer by use of the fluorescence microscope and has been awarded $2,950 for her project.

Dr. Donisch, who was born in Russia, was granted a $3,600 — fellowship for further study in biochemistry. She has studied or practiced medicine in Austria, Germany, and England, and from 1953 to 1959 was doctor at a West African mission.

Dr. Basrur is a native of India.

She earned her Ph.D. degree at the University of Toronto after preliminary study at the University of Mysore in Bangalore and has worked at the Ontario Veterinary College since 1955. She will share in a grant of $5,250 to work on the problem of how to easily grow human cancer cells in the laboratory. "If this project is successful," commented one of the Institute referees in recommending the grant, "it would yield results of value to many areas of cancer research." She has two children.

Election
