NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. Shep is a German Shepherd who became an unwilling movie star during a heart operation to save her life.

The dog, now two years old, was born a "blue baby", a condition caused by a constriction in the main artery leading to the heart. Dr. T. H. Reid of the Reid Veterinary Hospital discovered it while treating a broken paw. He gave Shep six or seven months to live.

The dog's owners, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Williams and their daughter Frances of Willoughby Township, said they could not afford an operation and Dr. Reid arranged for it to be performed free in the interest of science.

Shep was taken to the Guelph Veterinary College where Dr. Harold Read performed the operation. A record of the surgery was taken on film and will be made available to other doctors and will be shown on television.

College officials said Shep is the only dog in Canada to live through such an operation and she is now normal.

The dog was at the college for three months.

"She was thin and hardly looked strong enough to stand," said Mrs. Williams, "but she knew us straight away."

Shep likes to romp around the family farm but her fear of doctors sends her slinking away when anyone arrives carrying a small case. In fact, her illness made so afraid of men who might take her away again that she keeps a sharp eye open for men strangers and disappears when any come in sight.

WINDSOR — In 1937, John Colville's wife gave him a gold signet ring.

That was in Scotland where he lived at the time. During the Second World War, when he was in the Royal Navy, he lost the ring.

Mr. Colville emigrated here about five years ago from Scotland.

His father-in-law, who lives in Troon, Scotland, was digging in his garden several weeks ago when he found the ring.

VANCOUVER — For some Soviet women, a job aboard an ocean-going vessel is a career. For others it's an opportunity to study while working.

Grain ships from the Soviet Union travelling to and from Van-cover often have women among their crews and the men speak with pride of their female mates.

Women can handle the job just as well as men, they work well and never cause trouble, the men say.

One notable example is a woman who once served as a captain at sea and now is an instructor at the Soviet nautical school. Another is captain of a whaling ship.

"Our women spend their spare hours at sea studying to be lawyers, doctors, teachers, engineers," said Nicolai Koblov, chief officer of the Emilian Pugachev.

Luba Bustrova, 21, is an example. She is a stewardess aboard the ship and in her spare time studies engineering, hoping to get her papers in two or three years.

Anastasia Klibkova, 52, is the ship's cook. She proudly talked about a daughter who is a doctor, a son working as an engineer and her husband, a seagoing machinist with whom she has spent about four months out of each of her 25 years at sea.

The Emilian Pugachev's doctor is also a woman.

WASHINGTON — A United States government scientist reported there's a chance the common cold can be checkmated soon providing someone is willing to pick up a $1,000,000,000 research tab.

Dr. Robert J. Huebner, a virologist of the National Institutes of Health, said the hope springs from findings that up to 60 per cent of acute respiratory ailment striking children are due to viruses already known to scientists.

These can be reproduced, at least to some degree, in tissue culture. Tissue culture is the first step towards producing any kind of vaccine.

Huebner made the statement to reporters at the annual Academy of Pediatrics.

LONDON — "It won't buy me no more frijoles," said the taxi driver in Mexico City.

But from London to Hong Kong to South America, men and women of the non-Communist world were shaken by Russia's successful launching of history's first man in space—shaken by exhilaration or fear, disappointment or doubt, hope or despair.

Most viewed the Soviet achievement as a tremendous victory over the United States. To Giovanni Battista Cardinal Montini, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Milan, Soviet man's conquest of space meant "the stature of man is growing . . . the contemplation of the universe is growing . . . the hopes of the world are growing."

Walter Huber, a Viennese printer, sounded a theme heard over and over again in the Western world — "It's thrilling news to me, but a big disappointment that the Communists are there first and so far ahead of the West."

MOSCOW — British consumer goods such as shoes and women's dresses find a ready sale in the Soviet Union despite a recent complaint that some British manufacturers were sending "shoddy articles."

Consumer goods from Britain and other countries have been arriving in Russia in ever-increasing quantities since the Soviet trading organizations began to relax their former emphasis on imports of heavy machinery only.

In Moscow at any rate, it seems almost a point of honor among young people to own a pair of shoes and a dress with a foreign trademark. Styling and design of these are often far in advance of the produced product, and buyers scramble at the counters for the privilege of paying high prices for foreign goods.

The complaint was aired in the trade newspaper Economic Gazette which chided some British manufacturers for compromising Britain's reputation for high-quality goods. It complained specifically of poor-quality shoes and badly finished women's knitted dresses.

The Soviet Union had bought about 65,000 knitted women's dresses from Britain. Of this number, it was claimed, 933 dresses had to be returned because of defective zip fasteners, faulty dyes, grease spots and other defects.

Letter to the Editor

April 24, 1961

The Editor,
New Liskeard Speaker,
Haileyburian.

Dear Sir:

When I read the unwarranted attack by Arnold Peters, my first reaction was to sue Peters, the newspaper reporter who released the reports to the C.C.F. executive knowing they were untrue, and the bold editor of the New Liskeard Speaker and the Haileyburian, who cast discretion aside when he saw a chance to knife Cooke of Haileybury in the back once more.

After thinking is over I feel nothing but compassion for the scared, insecure farm boy who apparently will stop at nothing to secure his third term and a life pension of three thousand dollars per annum. I do not blame him as I do not know where else he could earn this amount.

In the case of the reporter I forgive him also, but less freely as he is educated and should know better than to fabricate news and release it for political reasons to Peters and also Murdo Martin, who dispensed it over C.F.C.L. TV as gospel truth last Saturday night. This is the same reporter who called me to the town pump house, produced a huge British Columbia salmon and insisted unsuccessfully that I help fake a news picture by lifting it out of the town water supply. This is the same reporter who transported a team of horses from New Liskeard to Haileybury by truck, had them unloaded at the fire hall and wished to have them hitched to the fire truck, until I ordered him removed from the building and forbade any picture taking on town property. He may eventually learn to report news and not manufacture it to his own specifications.

In closing I will add that the Haileybury Council did not meet or have any communication with Allister Groshart, national organizer for the Conservative Party. One councillor and myself were in the group who welcomed him to Haileybury. Over morning coffee he made it very plain that he has no political position or power, and that he is an organizer, making no advances or promises to anyone, nor did he. I was included in the get-together as Mayor of Haileybury not because of any political convictions. I am not related to Foster Rice nor are any members of the council as stated by Peters.

To you Mr. Editor of the New Liskeard Speaker and of the Haileyburian I give a word of advice, "Before you again print slanderous statements and untruths, check with your lawyers. The next person may not be so good natured."

Yours truly

Arthur H. Cooke,
Mayor Town of Haileybury.
