The Milk Industry Board has made a very interesting award following arbitration hearings for the Toronto milk market. This award will undoubtedly establish a precedent for other Ontario markets and its influence could be felt in all of Canada. The new agreement, based on this award, takes effect July 16th.

It would take more space than we have to even outline the main features of this new agreement but the ones that will be of most interest to all dairy farmers are an increase in the butterfat differential to a maximum of five cents, a three cent reduction in the basic price per cwt, establishment of a Base Committee to allocate bases to ALL shippers to the fluid market and new regulations for dairies to take on new shippers. When these become law the end of this week there is every reason to suppose that milk markets other than Toronto may include similar terms in their new agreements — at least, terms based on these principles.

The butterfat differential has long been a matter of controversy — among producers themselves as well as between producers and distributors — and the board's decision on five cents for one-tenth of a pound butterfat per cwt will not satisfy everybody. However, we suspect that the majority of producers will be happy and also most distributors and processors. It's a compromise between the present three and one-half cents and the six and one-half cents which the Ontario Whole Milk League, acting on behalf of the Toronto Milk Producers Association had asked for. With the price of 3.4 — which is standard milk — reduced three cents in the Toronto market it means that the basic price will be $5.07 per cwt; 3.5 milk will bring the producer $5.12; four per cent milk will be $5.37 and so on.

However, this differential is tied to the average price of butter while the three cent reduction is not tied to the differential. It will remain at three cents while this agreement is in force even if the average price of butter drops, which will mean a decrease in the differential. Of course, with butter prices supported by the federal government until May 1962, there is little likelihood of any change before that time. But if butter prices drop the differential can drop as far back as the present three and one-half cents. There is a sliding scale based on the average price of butter.

Setting up a Base Committee is an important development, too. There are Joint Committees operating in several markets but the Toronto committee has been inactive for some time. The Base Committee replaces it and will determine and amend the principles upon which bases are allotted to producers. Not only that, the Milk Industry Board made provision for two categories of producers — those whose yearly milk fat test is 4.4 per cent and above, and those below 4.4 per cent. Bases (or quotas) will be established for producers in BOTH groups. In the past many high test shippers have had no base or quota but have sold all their milk at top price. There may be instances in some markets where other than high test shippers have had no base or quota but this will not be possible in the Toronto market after this week.

Also, new shippers may be taken on by distributors only when sales of dairy requirements are at least 85 per cent of the base in each category. That means a dairy must be selling at least 85 per cent of its fluid milk quota or base before it can take on any new fluid shippers.
