CAMP GAGETOWN, N.B.—Yogi Bear was smarter than the average bear, but a weakness for easy meals was his downfall.

The husky, 250-pound frequenter of the army's training area here was all set for a summer of free rations when 5,000 troops of the 3rd Canadian Infantry Brigade Group moved into his territory.

Every night Yogi crunched through the dark bush, merrily scattering contents of garbage pails all over the soldiers' nice clean real estate.

The army got mad. A trap was set for Yogi, but it never got used.

The bear showed up a little early, right in the middle of a baseball game among officers of the 1st Regiment, Royal Canadian Horse Artillery.

Lieut. John Rennie of Gull Lake, Sask., went chasing into deep left field after a fly ball and met Yogi head on. The lieutenant went one way and Yogi went the other.

Other officers took after the bear and Yogi withdrew to his favorite woods, but no far enough.

Major Jack Goodine of Fredericton caught up and just happened to have a rifle handy. That was the end for Yogi.

PORT DOVER, Ont.—Don Buscombe, an amusement operator in this Lake Erie resort town, claimed success in the annual fight against clouds of flies which periodically blanket the downtown area.

Mr. Buscombe said he has mounted a large light bulb, which attracts the swarming flies into the path of a fan on a tree. The flies are blown against a shield, killing them. They drop into a bucket.

MACON, Ga. — A bus terminal employee making a routine check of storage lockers made an unexpected—and chilling—discovery.

Roger Tucker said he reached into a locker and felt "something that I knew wasn't supposed to be in there".

Tucker looked inside and saw about 15 snakes. They had been left in two paper sacks and a cardboard box.

Police officers responding to the shaken Tucker's call quickly rounded up the reptiles. They said the snakes were of several varieties and included one rattler.

Tucker, about 20, said that some of the snakes had wriggled out of the box. It was one of these that he grabbed.

JOLIET, Ill.—Two trucks collided at an intersection in a residential area. The result: Beer-on-the-rocks.

Police said a city dump truck loaded with eight tons of rock for a street project collided with a brewing company truck loaded with bottled beer.

The dump truck lost part of its load. The beer truck overturned, smashing most of its contents.

The truck drivers were slightly injured.

The Bible To-day

In LeRaincy, France, a small city on the northeast outskirts of Paris, a Bible exhibition under the title "Bible and Civilization" was set up under the patronage of the local historical society. LeRaincy is in the diocese of Meaux where Bishop Briconet, one of the main promoters of the Biblical movement which led to the Reformation, was active.

The Alliance Biblique Francaise set up its exhibition there and a group of Roman Catholics also prepared a series of panels on the message of the Bible. Archeological material was set up by the National Museum, Le Louvre. The Synagogue and the Freemasons were represented by exhibits; both of whom worked on the theme of the building of the Temple.

A local connoisseur lent a selection from her collection of Biblical etchings of the 17th - 19th centuries.

The Exhibition was visited by thousands of people including a large number of school children.

The Alliance Biblique Francaise got a mention of this exhibition in the French Reader's Digest, which said, "The Bible also has a place in your home in order to contribute to your happiness ----- If you wish to possess a Bible write to ----- and gave the address." Since this publicity appeared the Bible Society received an average of some twelve orders a day for the first two weeks.

PIERRE POODLE

Is there a dog in the house? Yes, there is, but is he as tame and lovable as a newborn baby poodle? You'll love making it too, in light oxford wool, or pink, or any colour you want. The eyes are shiny buttons and the collar is trimmed with rhinestones and sequins. A very nice article for your next fall bazaar. Would you like to obtain the crochet instructions, simply send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Needlecraft Department of this paper, requesting PIERRE POODLE, Leaflet NO. C-P.C. 1472.
