miles southeast of Cobalt. The company is the former Norsyncomaque Mines.

It is expected that the unwatering job can be completed in about three weeks' time, A. D. Hellens, president, said.

The mining plant has been checked over, and is now ready for operation. A new collar has been constructed in the shaft and weak members in the head frame are being replaced.

A complete review of all geological information is now in progress and is to be correlated prior to examination, sampling and mapping when unwatering has been completed.

A study of the underground sample plans indicate that silver is already present in a number of headings in the most recent of the underground workings.

Plans also show that the database sill has been displaced by faulting or by a roll for over 100 ft. in the immediate vicinity of the area where silver occurs. This condition is deemed very favourable for concentration of silver deposits and will be vigorously explored, Mr. Hellens says. The area in question has barely been opened, and a large area of untouched ground is available for exploration.

In addition, a strong vein system No. 5, No. 6 and No. 7 containing high grade silver occurrences is also to be explored. This system strikes northwest-southeast, which is the general strike of the main producing veins on the Silver-Miller, Cobalt Lode and Christopher mines north of the Silvermaque property.

The No. 6 vein contained ore ranging up to 1,000 ozs. per ton. Over 100 tons is on the ore dump, and averages 35 ozs. per ton. Very limited work has been done on this vein.
