I See by THE PAPERS

OTTAWA (CP) — One man has been charged with shooting with intent to wound and two others are being sought by police after gunmen in a passing car fired at three midtown stores and a restaurant recently.

Douglas William Moncrief, 22 pleaded guilty to the charge and was remanded one week.

Constable Bill Culyer said he arrested Moncrief after chasing a car with three occupants along six blocks and forcing it off the road.

He said two men fled on foot and that one of them threw a .45-calibre pistol into a parked car. At least five shots were fired, one of them penetrating the busy all-night restaurant, but no one was injured.

Eddie Saikley, 25, in charge of the restaurant, said four young men started a fight when he became suspicious and called police to expel them. About 20 minutes later a car sped by and one passenger sprayed the four establishments with bullets.

OTTAWA (CP) — This is the story of a moose who played a fatal game of peek-a-boo during the hunting season.

It was told in the capital recently by two government employees, Mac Barnett of the unemployment insurance commission and Lorne Storey of the bureau of statistics.

A few days previous, while they were camping out on a hunting trip in Ontario's Temagami district, they were awakened by a rustling noise at the stovepipe hole in their tent—they hadn't bothered to bring a stove.

Barnett pecked out — just as Mr. Moose was peeking in.

Before the surprise could register on either man or moose, Barnett grabbed his rifle and felled the 1,000-pound animal with a bullet between the eyes.

ATLANTA (AP) — A chemical salesman is suing his former mother-in-law for $1,000,000 on grounds that she gave his 16-month-old daughter vodka in her tomato juice.

The salesman, Robert Lee Slater, charged in his suit, which went on trial recently, that Mrs. Oran E. Dodd caused damage to his peace and happiness by furnishing 'alcoholic and intoxicating liquors daily from Feb. 3, 1958 to March 17, 1958' to his child.

The petition charged that Mrs. Dodd persuaded the girl's mother to feed alcoholic beverages to her as a "pacifier."

It also said the child's mother, Mrs. Norma Jane Dodd Slater, left Slater to live with her mother and filed suit for divorce in February, 1958.

GORE BAY (CP) — Charles Wabegijig, 35, of Manitowaning was sentenced recently to two months in jail in connection with the stabbing death of his wife.

Wabegijig was charged with manslaughter when he went on trial recently but pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of assault causing bodily harm.

His wife, Martha, 31, was stabbed in her home in June and died later in hospital at Sudbury, about 100 miles northwest of this Manitowaning Island town.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — A mother and her ailing son were killed this week when a private plane on a mercy flight crashed into Conception Bay near Carbonear, about 30 miles west of here.

The pilot, Donald MacKenzie of Halifax, escaped after being thrown through the glass cockpit into the water.

A Search and Rescue report, listing both mother and son as dead, said the bodies were believed to be in the cockpit under 60 feet of ocean water. The boy was suffering acute appendicitis.

Neither was identified.

PORT ARTHUR (CP)—A routine traffic violation case has resulted in a statement by a 40-year-old man that he is a former German prisoner-of-war who escaped from a Canadian prison camp 16 years ago.

Edward Luczak, who says his real name is Berger, was sentenced in magistrate's court recently to 10 days for driving while his licence was under suspension and for using a false name to obtain a new licence.

Following the sentencing he told Magistrate T. W. Connor that he had lived for years in fear of being caught and sent back to his old home in Germany—which now is in the Soviet occupation zone.

The magistrate was quoted as saying that in cases of prisoners-of-war who escaped and evaded capture in Canada most were allowed to remain after the war. He did not think the traffic offence would do the man's previous record any harm.

His wife, Mrs. Joanne Luczak, said in an interview that while she knows little about her husband's wartime experiences she does know that he escaped from a prison camp in 1945.

"I don't know where the camp was — Ottawa or Lethbridge, I think."

He told the magistrate he had worked on a farm near Victoria, B.C., for three years after his escape. He married in 1948 and moved east. They now have two children, both boys, aged 10 and 12.

SUDBURY (CP) — Hung Lee, 30, testified recently that he banged on a car horn with his head to attract police while fighting with two men in their automobile.

Robert Larocque, 23, and Claude Ducharme, 19, both of Sudbury and charged with attempted robbery, were remanded.

"The men knocked me down and threw me under a parked car," Lee said.

"Next they dragged me out and when I broke away again they again caught me and threw me into the back seat of their car."

The victim, employee of a Sudbury restaurant, said he kicked the car keys out of the driver's hand as he attempted to start the engine. A police car drove by at that point and: "I got my head onto the steering wheel. My hands were being held. With my head I blew and blew the horn and the police cruiser heard it and turned around."

NEW YORK (AP) — For Bashir Ahmad, a simple, smiling camel driver from Pakistan, this was the greatest day of his life.

He met President Kennedy at the White House and a few hours later found himself amid the towered splendor of New York, which O. Henry once called Baghdad-on-the-subway.

Bashir was obviously enthralled. "I have met the man of the world," he said through an interpreter as he left the White House. "You hold your leader in high esteem to have him live in such a nice house," the 48-year-old Bashir added.

Vice-President Lyndon Johnson, during an Asian tour last May, invited Bashir to come here for a visit. It ends today when he departs for his home in Karachi.

Bashir refers to Kennedy as the American badshah—or king. His title for Johnson is deputy king.

"There was no plan for him to meet the president," White House Press Secretary Pierre Salinger told reporters. The president saw the camel driver go by on a tour of the White House "and asked him to come to his office for a minute or two."

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Sheldon Balas, 28, left his wedding reception at the Ambassador Hotel recently to visit the rest room. Inside, he met a sour-faced little man who said:

"You look happy. What's wrong?"

"Wrong?" said Balas. "There's nothing wrong. I just got married. I'm happy, that's all."

"Well," said the gloomy little man. "I'm a married man myself. Let me give you a present. I'm a cab driver and my cab's parked outside, with the keys in it. Use it in good health. Drive it all you want and send the bill to the friendly Yellow Cab Company. Consider it a wedding gift from me and the company."

Balas thanked the stranger, fetched his bride Deveda, put her in the cab and drove off.

They didn't pay much attention to a man standing back at the hotel yelling. This, of course, was the real cab driver, David Krieger.

Krieger phoned his boss, who phoned police, who seized Balas and his wife and carted them off to the police station.

Balas, who did not find his predicament amusing, took a couple of swings at press photographers.

When he cooled off and explained, the cab company forgave him and said it would press no charges.

The couple left with this admonition from police: "Next time you take a cab, make sure it's got a driver."
