

New Competition For Marksmen

A new Dominion Marksmen Handgun competition which will be available to Canadians from coast to coast has just been announced.

In announcing the new competition, Warren Johnson, executive secretary of Dominion Marksmen said it will bring the association's handgun program into line with the small bore rifle program and will provide 11 awards for pistol shooters. This represents an increase of eight awards to the former handgun program.

In addition to the bronze, silver and gold lapel which were awarded to qualifying competitors for slow fire handgun shooting, marksmen can now shoot for silk embroidered crests in timed and rapid fire events and for silver and gold expert shields.

Mr. Johnson explained that the awards must be won in a certain order as they indicate the ability of the shooter. In order of merit they are the bronze, silver and gold lapel buttons for slow fire competition; marksman, sharpshooter and expert crests in timed and rapid fire and finally the silver and gold expert shields for combined slow, timed and rapid fire shooting.

To win the expert shields a marksman must fire 20 sets of three targets, each set comprised of one slow, one timed and one rapid fire target.

Slow fire is a rate of fire in which the competitor is allowed five minutes to fire five shots. In timed fire the competitor has 20 seconds for five shots and, in rapid fire, 10 seconds. In each case 10 shots are fired on each target.

Mr. Johnson said Canada has more than 500 pistol clubs with a regular membership of about 10,000.

Last year a record breaking 14,726 Canadians qualified for Dominion Marksmen awards in all competitions.
