'For A Safer Community Day' proclaimed for tomorrow

The Halton Women's Place Business Advisory Committee, the Halton Regional Police Service and the Region of Halton are all working together to proclaim Dec. 19 as the first Halton Women's Place "For A Safer Community Day."

A ceremony will be held at 10 am in the atrium of the shared facility at the Halton Regional Centre at 1151 Bronte Rd., Oakville. During this holiday season of special need and giving,

Halton Women's Place and the Halton Regional Police Service are also appealing to the community for their continued, generous support. Donations for Halton Women's Place will be accepted at all Halton Regional Police offices on Thursday.

The Georgetown office is at 11 Division, 217 Guelph St.

The "For A Safer Community Day" festivities begin with a selection of songs performed by the Heritage

Glen School Choir. A proclamation declaring Dec. 19 as Halton Women's Place "For A Safer Community Day" will then be read by Regional Chair Joyce Savoline, followed by comments from Chief of Police Peter Campbell and Halton Women's Place Executive Director Theresa Greer as well as a representative from the Halton Business Advisory Committee. Dignitaries will then cut the cake and distribute it to all present.
