EDWIN RAWDON.

CHAPTER XI.

CONCLUSION.

But we cannot follow each character of this story as closely as we hitherto have done. We, therefore will bring the story to an end without following the Westford family to London, and recounting all the hardships through which they had to pass. How Lionel for a long time could find no work, and how when he was on the eve of giving up in despair he at last got a situation with Edwin Rawdon, whereby he was to copy a set of pictures which Rawdon's son had painted, and which were dim with age. How while he was there he in some manner learned of how Edwin Rawdon had received the twenty thousand pounds from Harley Westford, and how he also learned of his father's sudden disappearance.

Nor will we follow the course of Violet who first procured a situation as governess and when she was succeeding admirably in her duties, a demon, in the shape of Edwin Rawdon, circulated evil stories concerning her character, which reached her mistress' ear, and then she was unceremoniously discharged.

She was then without work for a long time, and the family were on the point of starvation when she got a situation in a play house, from which a miserable pittance was received. She however succeeded very well, and one evening, while performing before a crowded house, she perceived George Stanmore in a private box.

By way of digression we might say she had heard not a word from him since the letter she found in the yew tree, although she had given several times to the address written therein.

This was the first time she had seen him, and she endeavored in every way to make him recognize her, but without success. She thought everything was against her and felt very disconsolate indeed.

A few nights after this as Violet was going home from attending to her duties in the play house, she was kidnapped and taken many miles into the country, by a dashing young nobleman, who had become possessed of a sudden fancy to make her his wife. She however was returned to her mother through the agency of the young man's mother, and Mrs. Westford, who was almost distracted during her daughter's absence, was made happy as she could be considering her circumstances.

One day as Violet and her mother were out shopping they met Gilbert Thorndeigh, the first mate of the Lily Queen. He naturally was much surprised at finding his Captain's wife and daughter walking the streets of London in the poor clothing they had on. Questions on both sides were speedily asked and answered, and Thorndeigh, who accompanied the ladies to their poor home left with the determination of finding Captain Westford, or he would learn what had become of him.

He went to the bank and found Jacob Danielson.

Before proceeding further we might say that Danielson had at one time been in the employ of Sir John Pengonby and while serving him he had presumed to ask his daughter's hand. For this presumption he was horse-whipped and discharged, for which reward he always credited Clara, now Mrs. Westford. But he had lately found that she was not at all to blame, and he was now anxious to have her affairs righted.

In the meantime the shock Lionel had received at hearing of his father's fate had unsettled his nerves and he had become quite delirious, as soon as Edwin Rawdon was apprised of his delirium, and the way he talked, he had Lionel removed to a private asylum.

While here he was much surprised at meeting his father, who, it appears had not been killed, either by the knife-stab, nor the fall. But Danielson had found him, and had him removed to this asylum.

As has already been said Jacob Danielson had become eager to see the Captain's family righted, and for this purpose he appointed that Gilbert Thorndeigh, with Mrs. Westford and Violet should come to the bank the next day at twelve o'clock, when he said they would all be surprised.

They accordingly appeared exactly as the clock struck twelve, and then a scene ensued.

Thorndeigh at once asked Rawdon for the twenty thousand pounds which had been deposited in his hands by Captain Westford. Rawdon asked him to show his proof that the money was entrusted to him when Danielson came forward and showed him the receipt which Rawdon had made and handed to the Captain just one year before.

At this moment Harley Westford and his son walked into the room, and then indeed was a blessed reunion. Edwin Rawdon's feelings, at this juncture can better be imagined than described.

After the first joy of meeting was over, the Captain demanded his money, which was immediately handed over by the banker, who now saw that all his plans were spoiled, and he a ruined man. He also handed over the title deeds of the estate in Hampshire.

After doing this the banker retired to a bedroom, from whence almost immediately proceeded the sound of a pistol being discharged, and all making their way to the room they found the body of the banker lying on the floor, the warm blood flowing from a hole made by a pistol bullet in his forehead. He was dead when they found him—the miserable man thus hurrying himself into the presence of his god.

With respect to the other characters of our story, we have little to say.

They all returned to the Grange and they were indeed a happy family.

But there there are two more houses near the old Grange, and there are both the homes of happy families.

Soon after their return to the Grange there had been a double wedding, and Lionel, with Julia Everton (daughter of the banker—with whom Lionel had fallen in love while painting her brother's picture), and George Stanmore (who was none other than the son of the banker) with Violet Westford were the parties thus happily united.

Now an old white haired man may be seen at almost any time playing the children of either one or the other couple. This old man is Jacob Danielson, who is being rewarded for his share in recovering the Captain's fortune.

It is his chief delight to recount to the grandchildren of Captain Westford how the fortune was lost but recovered.

THURSDAY MORNING, FEB. 27, 1879.

The Free Press.

In our last issue we briefly announced that a change in the appearance of the FREE PRESS was about to take place. We have partially fulfilled our promise that this issue would present an entirely different appearance from our last, but owing to a delay we have been unable to get our new electrotype heading. It will however, be in time for next week. On looking over this issue our readers will notice that there is a much larger amount of reading matter on the first and fourth pages. It will also be noticed that the columns have been widened, and now, instead of thirty-two columns we have twenty-eight. But our readers must not think they are getting less reading than heretofore, as such is not the case, because smaller type is used and the columns are wider—thus more reading can be got into a less space. We hope the change will be considered a good one by our patrons, and that it will prove profitable to us.

A BIG SMOKE!

AND A LITTLE FLAME

Mr. E. Nicklin's Residence almost Destroyed by Fire.

On Saturday evening last, about 9:30 o'clock the people of Acton were suddenly startled by the cry of "Fire, Fire," which was immediately followed by the fire bell ringing forth its loud alarm, thus effectually bringing the majority of the inhabitants of the village to the streets. The question then was "Where is the fire" and the answer was not long in coming, that "E. Nicklin's house was on fire." All immediately proceeded to the scene, and a very excited crowd soon collected. For some time the position of the fire could not be placed, and it was impossible to get upstairs, as the smoke and heat were unbearable. Water was carried into the house and thrown around but without effect. At last a window, which was forced in, and John Warden, a young man of the village, thus made his way into the bedroom where it was found the fire had originated. After the exact position of the fire had been ascertained it required very little energy to extinguish it.

The fire itself caused very little damage, but the water which was thrown around in large quantities ruined carpets and furniture, while considerable damage was done by the hasty removal and rough handling to which the furniture was subjected. The whole loss will amount to about $200; the building was insured in the Waterloo Mutual for $1,000

School Trustees Annual Report.

To the Editor of the Free Press.

DEAR SIR,—I wish to call the attention, through the columns of your interesting paper, of the School Trustees to the fact that the Abstract of the Annual Report for the year 1878, has not been published this year, nor in any way are the ratepayers shown how much money has been expended, or how it was expended. An abstract has been published, and the ratepayers generally wish to know what is done with their money. I trust the matter will be attended to at the next meeting of the School Board. Pardon me, Mr. Editor, for occupying your valuable space.

I am yours &c.,

RATEPAYER.

WHAT THEY SAY OF IT! A FEW FACTS FOR THE PEOPLE.—There are but few preparations of medicines which have withstood the impartial judgment of the people for any great length of time. One of these is Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Read the following and be convinced:—Thomas Robinson, Farnham centre, P.Q., writes, "I have been afflicted with rheumatism for the last ten years, and have tried many remedies without any relief, until I tried Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil and since then have had no attack of it. I would recommend it to all." J. H. Esel, Hotel Keeper, West Shefford, P.Q., writes, "I have been troubled with liver complaint for several years, and have tried different medicines with little or no benefit, until I tried Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which gave me immediate relief, and I would say that I have used it since with the best effect. No one should be without it. I have tried it on my horses in case of cuts, wounds, etc., and think it is equally as good for horse as for man." A. Maybee, Merchant, Warkworth, writes, "I have sold hundreds of bottles of Eclectric Oil, and it is pronounced by the public, one of the best medicines they have ever used; it has done wonders in healing and relieving pain, sore throats, etc., and is worthy of the greatest confidence."—Joseph Rusan, Township Percy, writes, "I was persuaded to try Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil for a lame knee which troubled me for three or four years, and I never found anything like it for curing lameness. It is a great public benefit.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.—Ask for Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. See that the signature of S. N. THOMAS is on the wrapper, and the names of Northrop & Lyman are blown in the bottle, and Take no other. Sold by all medicine dealers. Price 25 cents. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto, Ont., Proprietors for the Dominion.

CATARRH

CONSTITUTIONAL Catarrh Remedy

CURES CATARRH

THOUSANDS APPLAUD ITS WONDERFUL CURES.

HEAR WHAT A REVEREND GENTLEMAN SAYS OF THE CONSTITUTIONAL REMEDY.

T. J. B. HARDING, Esq.,

BROCKVILLE, ONT.

DEAR SIR—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you. As at first the happy effects seemed to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I suspected it to be Catarrh. In reading in your Circular I saw my case described in many particulars. The inward "drop" from the head had become very disagreeable, and a choking sensation often prevented me from lying long. I would feel like smothering and be compelled to sit up in the bed. My health and spirits were seriously affected. When your Agent came to Walkerton in August 1876, I secured three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I found decided relief, and when I had used two bottles and a third, I quit taking it, feeling quite cured of that ailment, and have not used any since until of late I have taken some for a cold in my head.

A sense of duty to sufferers from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, prompts me to send you this Certificate, unsolicited, with leave to make what use of it you may see proper.

Yours truly,

W. TINDALL, Methodist Minister.

MANHOOD,

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED.

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the RADICAL CURE (without medicine) of SPERMATORRHŒA, Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Emissions, Impediments to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

Price, in a sealed envelope, only six cents, or two postage stamps.

This celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.
