Lads of new regiments, who had never seen a shot fired in anger, were as cool as the seasoned veterans of the Thirteenth and Eightieth.

Lord Chelmsford's soldierly coolness and decisive clear-headedness in action go far to redeem the passiveness and peevish vacillation which are his characteristics when no battle is raging. One might wish bim a mili-tary Rip Van Winkle, only wakening to direct a battle. Evelyn Wood's face was radiant with the rapture of the fray as he rode un and down behind his regiment, exposed to a storm of missiles. All the officers of the headquarters staff and Newdigate's staff were unscathed, save Lieut. Milne of The causes of life and of death are to the First, who was slightly wounded, and
