THURSDAY MORNING, JAN. 20, 1881.
YOUNG MEN'S CORNER.

Grandma and Bossie.

O, grandma sits in her creaking chair,
And in her hand she holds a string,
I'm going to be married, O, grandmamma!

A Child's Word in Season.

An English Clergyman says: "Very recently a little boy in my parish, only six years of age, was sent to fetch his father from a public house."

"No, I can't take that; I belong to the Band of Hope."
The men looked at one another, but go one was found to repeat the temptation.

"Well, if you won't take the beer here is a penny for you to buy some bull's-eye."
The boy took the penny and said: "I thank you, but I had rather not buy bull's-eye; I shall put it in the savings bank."

Hold On Boys.

Hold on to your tongue when you are just ready to swear, lie or speak harshly, or use an improper word.
Hold on to your hand when you are about to punch, strike, steal, or do any improper act.

Hold on to your feet when you are on the point of kicking, running off from study, or pursuing the path of error, shame or crime.
Hold on to your temper when you are angry, excited or irritated upon, or when others are angry with you.

Hold on to your heart when evil associates seek your company and invite you to join in their wild, game of revelry.
Hold on to your good name at all times, for it is of more value than gold, high place or fashionable attire.

Hold on to truth, for it will serve you well, and do you throughout eternity.
Hold on to virtue—it is above all price to you in all times and places.

Hold on to your good character, for it is and will be your best wealth.
A Little Advice.

I want to give you three or four rules. One is, always look at the person you speak to. When you are addressed, look straight at the person who speaks to you. Do not forget this.

Another is, speak your words plainly. Do not mumble or mumble. If words are worth saying, they are worth pronouncing distinctly and clearly.

Another is, do not say disagreeable things. If you have nothing pleasant to say, keep silent.
A fourth is—and oh! children, remember it all your lives—think three times before you speak once!

Have you something to do that you find hard and would prefer not to do? Then listen. Do the hard thing first, and get it over with. If you have done wrong, go and confess it. If your lesson is tough, master it. If the garden is to be weeded, weed it first and play afterward. Do the thing you don't like to do first; and then with a clear conscience do the rest.

Words of Wisdom.
A fault confessed is half redressed.
A full stomach is apt to be deaf to instruction.
The future of society is in the hands of the mothers.
Love, faith, patience—these are the three essentials of a happy life.

Soldman and the Blacksmith.

The story goes that, during the building of Solomon's Temple, that wise ruler decided to treat the artificers employed on his famous edifice to a banquet. While the men were enjoying the good things his bounty had provided, King Solomon moved about from table to table, endeavoring to become better acquainted with his workmen.

To another Solomon said:—"What is your trade?" and the reply was:—"A mason."
"Who makes your tools?"
"The blacksmith," replied the mason.

A third stated that he was a stone cutter, and that the blacksmith also made his tools. The fourth man that King Solomon addressed was the blacksmith himself. He was a powerful man, with bared arms, on which the muscles stood out in bold relief, seemingly almost as hard as the metal he worked.

"And what is your trade, my good man?" said the king.
"Blacksmith," laconically replied the man of the anvil and sledge.
"Who makes your tools?"
"Make 'em myself," said the blacksmith.

Whereupon King Solomon immediately proclaimed him the king of mechanics, because he could not only make his own tools, but all other artificers were forced to go to him to have their tools made.

Striking Hard Pan.

On Thursday night diplomas were awarded to students of a New York business college at the Academy of Music. Rev. Robert Colyer made the address, his subject being "Hard Pan."

During the course of his remarks he said that he had worked on a farm, carried hod, shod horses, broken stone on a turpentine, had resaped and cradled grain, dug wells, cut wood and had preached sermons that nobody wanted to hear.

When evil days come, as evil days will, no man deserves the title of gentleman if he does not take honor: work to do regardless of social influences.

When country boys come to the city, if they will hold on to the old sweet ways, they can defy the world.

Hot Sand a Good Bedfellow.
The comfort which a hot water bag or even a hot brick may afford a person on retiring, chilled, is very great, and beyond this, the use of some such warmth producing appliance is useful as a health preservative and restorative.

But one of the most convenient articles to be used as a bed warmer in a sick room is a sand bag. Get some clean, fine sand, dry it thoroughly in a kettle on the stove, make a bag about eight inches square of flannel, fill it with the dry sand, sew the opening carefully together, and cover the bag with cotton, or linen cloth. This will prevent the sand from shifting out and will also enable you to heat the bag quickly by placing it in the oven, or on the top of the stove. After using this you will never again attempt to warm the feet of a sick person with a bottle of hot water or a brick. The sand holds the heat a long time, and the bag can be tucked up to the back without hurting the invalid. It is a good plan to make two or three of the bags and keep them ready for use.

We measure minds by their stature; it would be better to esteem them by their beauty.
An old bachelor, who edits a paper somewhere in the Western country, puts "Melancholy Accidents" as a head for marriages in his paper.

CHARVING.—Carving isn't fun. A young man in a neighboring township was invited to carve a turkey at a dinner, recently, and before the knife was finally taken away from him he had upset a glass of water, wrenched his shoulder, shot the bird across the table into a lady's lap, and nearly jabbed a man's eye out, and it wasn't a tough bird, either.
