Two Gentlemen.

I saw two young gentlemen on a street car to-day. One of them was grown up. He was handsomely dressed in a gray' business suit, and Lad very next kid gloves and finboots. The other was about twelve year. old. His jacket had several patches, auneeded more, and his shirt was of brown cotton and not very clean. Do you wonder how I knew he was a gentleman ! I will tel

The boy went through the car to give message to the driver. As he returned h gave a little fump through the door, and as he did so his bare teet touched the grown gentleman's knee, and left a little mud or it. Turning round on the phtform, he raised his straw hat and said very politely,

"Please ercuse me." Then the other gentleman bowed in hitura-just as he world have done to one o his own age-and said, with a pleasau smile, "Certainly." The Iroquois Indians, many of whom are very fine gentlemen, say sometimes of a rud-person, "His mother did not teach hin manners when he was young." I am inclined to think that the motherof both young gentlemen had taken a good deal of pains with their manuers, because politeness came so naturally and early.

Advice to Little Once

I would not say "I don't exre," so much if I were you. Just think how many times you say it, and you generally say it whei. you are angry, and do not think what you are saying. When your mamma says, " am sorry my little one is so naughty," you did care, but you were angry, and so you said you did not: Never say, "I don't care," duless you are very sore that you don't. After you have thought a little while, itetead of not caring, you will wan: to say, " I will try not to be naughty any more, mamma." If the scholars laugh where you make mistakes in your Sanday-school lesson, don't get angry and say, "I don' care." That would not be exactly true. I you really did not care you would not get
